South Koreans Clear Passage

SAIGON (AP) — South Korean troops cleared the enemy from a vital pass today between the coast and the major imperiled cities of the central highlands, U.S. and Korean spokesmen announced.

The highway, No. 19, still is blocked by destroyed culverts and damaged roadway, but if North Vietnamese troops return in force these can be repaired so that supply convoys can resume runs into the highlands.

The announcement of the clearing of An Khe Pass came from a Korean spokesman and John Paul Vann, senior U.S. adviser in the central highlands.

The announcement came as the North Vietnamese offensive in the central highlands slowed down, and the enemy shot down a big U.S. transport supplying embattled An Loc, north of Saigon. Six American crewmen were missing.

Nixon Schedules Vietnam Address

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Henry A. Kissinger freshly returned from a secret Moscow trip and the Paris peace talks resuming Thursday, President Nixon gives the nation a Vietnam report tonight including his decision on U.S. troop levels there after May 1.

U.S. forces in South Vietnam currently are slated to drop to 69,000 by the end of this month. This nears the residual-force strength of 25,000 to 35,000 men Nixon has indicated will stay on until Hanoi frees American prisoners.

Besides scheduling the widely awaited presidential radio-TV address for 10 p.m. EST, the White House also:

— Announced U.S. and Saigon negotiators will return to the Paris parole Thursday, with their first item to be "discussion of measures which will put an end to the flagrant North Vietnamese invasion of South Vietnam."

Pay Patients Nod For Ellis-Fischel

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Senate revived and passed today a bill allowing pay patients to be treated at Ellis-Fischel Cancer Hospital in Columbia.

The vote sending it to the governor was 22-9.

Indigents and patients who can not pay part of their treatment costs would still have first priority for space at the hospital but if beds were available, patients who can pay their own way would be admitted.

Passed and sent back to the House was a bill that would ban the use of studded tires on Missouri highways between April 1 and Nov. 1 — a measure designed to save wear and tear on highway surfaces.

Also sent back to the House with Senate changes was a bill that would let pickup trucks carrying campers be driven at 70 miles an hour instead of 60. It raises the

The U.S. Command said 24 American helicopters and 18 planes have been lost since the North Vietnamese offensive began 27 days ago, with 25 Americans killed, eight wounded and 41 missing in the air losses. Spokesmen said these figures do not include Americans killed or wounded in aircraft that have been damaged but not destroyed.

With the western highlands province of Kontum already seriously threatened, Communist troops continued their push into coastal Binh Dinh Province 75 miles to the east and cut Highway 1, the country's main north-south road. Highway 14 north of Kontum and east-west Highway 19 leading from the coast to Pleiku were severed earlier.

Landing Zone Salem, a key South Vietnamese position on Highway 1 in coastal Phu My District, fell just before noon after more than 12 hours of enemy attack.

Other North Vietnamese troops isolated Bong Son, another district town to the north, cut Highway 1 and began rounding up civilians to carry supplies.

In the highlands to the west, the North Vietnamese drive down Highway 14 toward Kontum City appeared stalled by the destruction of a bridge by U.S. bombers.

Enemy gunners kept up sporadic shelling of airfields at Kontum and Pleiku, 25 miles to the south. The U.S. Command reported that an Army observation helicopter was shot down near enemy-held Dak To but said there were no casualties.

The United States sent 75 B52 bombers against North Vietnamese positions in South Vietnam. They dropped nearly 2,000 tons of bombs, and more than half of the strikes were in the central region.

New fighting was reported around Saigon.

Fighting continued for the 20th day at An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon, and other battles erupted northwest and southeast of the capital.

The U.S. Command said a four-engine C130 transport was shot down a mile southwest of An Loc while making a supply drop.

A Magistrate Court trial date of May 18 was set Wednesday morning by Judge Frank Armstrong for Robert W. Brauer, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Holt, Route 2, on a charge of conveying false information regarding a destructive substance.

Brauer had his bond reduced from $3,000 to $2,000. A property bond was made by his parents in court Wednesday.

Brauer was arrested Tuesday in the Safeway Store, Broadway and Ohio, and was held for investigation of making bomb threat calls to Smith-Cotton High School.

Information leading to the arrest was obtained through a tap on the phone line to Smith-Cotton High School, according to Sheriff Emmett Fairfax. Fairfax explained that when a threat was called to the school Monday, informing school officials a bomb was set to go off at 2 p.m. that day, the tap on the line revealed later the location from which the call had been made. He said from that information a check of which persons had visited the address resulted in the arrest later.

There were a number of senators absent, and Spradling said he wanted as many present as possible when the proposed constitutional change is debated to give the legislature authority to streamline the executive branch by centralizing the work of 87 boards, commissions and agencies within a dozen or more major departments.

In Massachusetts

Big McGovern Victory

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Political Writer

Sen. George S. McGovern vaulted to the lead in Democratic delegate strength today with a towering victory in the Massachusetts presidential primary and a surprise bonus in Pennsylvania.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey said he had "won a decisive battle" for the Democratic center by winning in Pennsylvania.

And in double defeat, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine said he would campaign on, declaring that his rivals would "have to fight like hell" to keep him from the White House nomination.

McGovern and Humphrey fought him separately Tuesday in the Massachusetts and Pennsylvania primaries, and beat him for delegates and popular votes. Next Tuesday they join head-on in a battle in Ohio, facing each other. Muskie and Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington.

Muskie finished a far-back second in Massachusetts, and was running third in Pennsylvania, behind the surprisingly strong Gov. George C. Wallace. The Alabama governor picked up eight per cent of the Massachusetts vote, and was running fourth there, behind Humphrey of Minnesota.

In Indianapolis, Wallace said his Pennsylvania showing "indicates George Wallace has a better chance to be the nominee than ever before."

Humphrey won Pennsylvania with 35 per cent of the vote. Wallace and Muskie each had 21 per cent, although the governor was 12,000 votes ahead in nearly complete returns. McGovern was narrowly behind them.

In a major Pennsylvania surprise, McGovern was picking up more delegates than Muskie with 94 per cent of the vote counted. Humphrey led the delegate competition there with 57. McGovern had 37 and Muskie 29.

In Massachusetts, McGovern was managing what no 1972 candidate had done before, capturing an absolute majority of the ballots in a crowded presidential preference race.

With 78 per cent of the precincts counted, the South Dakota senator had 52

McGovern 44.73% or 35 per cent.

Wallace 26.79% or 21 per cent.

McGovern 26.18% or 21 per cent.

Muskie 25.67% or 20 per cent.

Jackson 3.47% or 3 per cent.

In Massachusetts, with 57 per cent of the 1,964 precincts counted, the top of the 12-decided field stood this way:

McGovern 51.19% or 50 per cent.

Muskie 6.52% or 23 per cent.

Wallace 23.95% or 8 per cent.

Humphrey 23.80% or 8 per cent.

Committee Votes Recall For Richard Kleindienst

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee voted today to recall Acting Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst Thursday morning to take further testimony from him in its investigation of his nomination to head the Justice Department.

Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said the panel also decided to vote at 5 p.m. Thursday on whether to reaffirm its previous endorsement of Kleindienst.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., had pressed for extension of the Kleindienst hearings. They began March 2.

The committee meets behind closed doors today, ostensibly to vote on whether to approve, for the second time, President Nixon's nomination of Richard G. Kleindienst to be attorney general. But Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., planned an attempt to extend the hearings, begun on March 2, at least another day.

The committee has spent the past eight weeks investigating accusations by columnist Jack Anderson on the Justice Department's handling of an ITT antitrust case.

Anderson published in his Feb. 29 column a memo appearing to link settlement of three antitrust suits against ITT with the conglomerate's financial commitment to help San Diego attract this summer's Republican National Convention. ITT and the Nixon administration have denied any such link.

Kleindienst, whose nomination had been endorsed earlier by the committee, asked that the hearings be reopened so he could deny the Anderson accusations.

Since last Thursday, when White House aide Peter M. Flanigan testified as what seemed to be the final witness, new information has been made public.

To complete his testimony, Flanigan wrote a letter to the committee saying Felix G. Rohatyn, an ITT director, came to his office last June 29 to discuss the securities markets in Rohatyn's role as chairman of the surveillance committee of the New York Stock Exchange.

At the end of their discussion, Flanigan said, Rohatyn told him the Justice Department's settlement proposal "was so tough to be unacceptable to the company and that the company intended to continue to fight the suits in court."

Flanigan said he passed on the complaint

Continue Work on Composite

Completion of a composite "sketch" of a man who allegedly raped a 30-year-old Sedalia housewife last Wednesday might not be realized until the end of the week, according to Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax.

Fairfax said Wednesday it didn't appear probable that an accurate composite could be gained from a "kit" employed by law enforcement officials to identify criminal suspects. He said additional time and sketching would be necessary to obtain a suitable representation.

Fairfax said that when the picture was finished it would be made available to The Democrat-Capital for publication.

The woman described her assailant as in his 20's with dark hair, long sideburns and a mustache, it was reported.

Sedalia police and the sheriff's department both have several clues relating to the incident which they are presently investigating.

Additional Filings Are Reported

Dr. James R. Houchens, 1716 West Ninth, Tuesday became the third candidate and the only Republican to file for Pettis County coroner. Also filing was Jack Shelledy, Southwood Acres, who is seeking the Republican nod as eastern district judge of the Pettis County Court.

Dr. Houchens, 28, who has been in Sedalia for about a year, is president of the Pettis County Chiropractic Association. He said he is seeking the coroner's position because "I feel I am qualified as a member of the healing arts."

Dr. Houchens is a graduate of Palmer College of Chiropractic Medicine, Davenport, Iowa. He did a year's X-ray research at the college and at the National College at Lombard, Ill.

He served in the Army as a medical specialist in Southeast Asia and as a physical therapy specialist in Okinawa.

He was also supervisor of the department of physical medicine in the physical therapy clinic, Brokaw Hospital, Normal, Ill.

He is a member of the American

Dr. James R. Houchens

Chiropractic Association, Academy of Missouri Chiropractors, Missouri State Chiropractic Association, Pi Kappa Chi professional fraternity and the Wade Barne Lodge 512 AF and AM, Bloomington, Ill. He is also a member of Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

Dr. Houchens and his wife, Susan, reside at 223 Colonial Lane.

The other candidates for coroner are Kenneth J. Wasson, 1318 South Arlington, and Dr. John H. Owens, M.D., 2616 Plaza, both Democrats. The present coroner, Dr. Gordon C. Stauffacher, is not seeking re-election.

Shelledy's Republican opponent is Fred G. Kraft, Hugheville. The Democratic opponents are incumbent E. L. "Red" Birdsong, Route 1, who is seeking his 12th term, and Bennie Hatfield, 1613 South Montgomery.

Shelledy, 35, told The Democrat-Capital he entered the race for eastern district

Regional Drought—I

Gusty Midwestern Winds Kick Up Dust and Drought's Suspicions

By BILL JOHNSON

Associated Press Writer

The wheat and range grasses don't crackle underfoot yet, and there's water in the farm ponds. Many fields are ready for the row crops to go in and cattle are putting on their market weight.

But the gusty winds through the nation's midsection kick up clouds of dust. The professional rainmakers are at work in southwestern Oklahoma and here and there communities have banded together to pray for rain.

"The reason drought conditions aren't as bad this year as they were at the same time last year was that we had much above normal rainfall in the fall of 1971," said Bill Curry, Oklahoma state climatologist. "That put a lot of subsoil moisture in the ground."

That, basically, was the report from other states in the south-central part of the country, ranging from Nebraska to Texas and taking in Colorado and New Mexico.

Please tell me what to do about this, if anything. Thanks, Ann. — Silent But Seething

Dear S.: Since Mona and her little friend are in the same grade they have the same teacher. If she is an understanding person, she might be the ideal person to speak to the mother. The older girl is being done a disservice. She should not be foisted on her younger sister's friends but encouraged to make friends on her own.

Dear Ann Landers: A certain young lady who works here owes me money — not large amounts, just dimes and quarters for snacks from the cafeteria. She says, "I'll pay you tomorrow" — or, "Next time it will be on me." Tomorrow never comes and "next time" she's nowhere to be seen.

When an office collection is taken she asks me to put the money in for her — than she gets her name on the card and forgets to reimburse me.

This girl is nice in every other way but I am sick of her cheaping out. I hate to say "no" when she asks me to bring her a ten-cent cup of coffee from the cafeteria. Am I being petty? Should I overlook it? If not, what does one say? — La Salle Street Small Loan Committee

Dear Sal: One says, "No charge for the delivery service, but the coffee costs a dime." As for those small "loans" — you should have kept the dates and amounts on a slip of paper. Now you can only work from memory and say, "Sorry, I can't advance you any more money until you pay me what you owe me."

Through the first three and a half months of this year, though, most of this section has reported below-normal rainfall.

"It's getting real dry on the surface and it's beginning to sap the subsoil moisture," said John L. Wilson of the Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

In Colorado the dryness has been aggravated by the warm temperatures of late February and March, which depleted soil moisture and accelerated evaporation: hence, when the wind blows as it has the last three weeks, it raises more topsoil than is customary, is the way George Clegg, chief of the National Weather Service in Albuquerque, put it.

The constant winds have blown stronger than normal through much of the period. Temperatures, usually mild, hit summer-type readings in the 90s and even higher.

The combination of high winds and rising temperatures took more moisture out of the soil than usual.

At Boulder, Colo., Dr. Walter O. Roberts, head of the National Center for Atmospheric Research, had an even more ominous prediction. He said he agrees with a prediction that the Great Plains region may be facing one of the worst droughts of the 20th century, in some areas.

Most of the officials agreed it was too early to tell just how damaging the dry weather would be. April and May are traditionally the rainy seasons, and substantial rains still could go a long way toward saving a large part of the wheat crop as well as guarantee yields on other crops.

But in some areas, which wheat already has been ruined. Farmers in some sections of southwest Oklahoma already have plowed their wheat under or turned the cattle in to graze. Now they're waiting for sufficient moisture to plant cotton.

and are hoping it won't be like last year when they got the cotton in the ground in moisture and then watched the fields dry and then seeds.

"It has been a critical situation as far as crops and range are concerned," Billy Ray Gowdy, president of the Oklahoma Department of Agriculture, said. "It looks mighty bleak going into the growing season with insufficient moisture conditions."

The higher winds and higher temperatures of early spring this year hurt us.

"It's kind of like credit. When you get on the short end and owe a lot of payments it's hard to catch up. It's the same way with moisture."

Alan Haws of the Oklahoma Water Resources Board said the drought actually "has been going on 20 years. It became more acute the past three or four years."

In general, he said, the water table in Oklahoma is not going down although Tillman County has had a problem the last three or four years. A lot of people out there irrigate and the farmers are kind of competing with the cities — Tipton and Frederick — for water and the yield is dropping out."

Curry, the Oklahoma climatologist, said the first three months of 1972 were the driest on record for western and central Oklahoma, ranging to 5 percent of normal at Mangum and Elk City and 4 percent of normal at Erick.

(Next: Will the rains come soon enough?)

Television Prime Time Rule Disliked By Most

By JERRY BUCK

Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A nationwide survey of television station managers shows two-thirds of them dislike TV's prime time access rule, which would be magnified greatly if the Justice Department is successful in its antitrust suit against the networks.

The prime time rule was imposed last October by the Federal Communications Commission as a method of providing more diversified and innovative sources of programs than those offered by the networks. It requires the local stations to produce their own shows for a half hour each night or turn to independent producers or advertising agencies.

Whether more innovative and diversified programming has resulted is questionable.

Sixty-one out of 97 managers polled by The Associated Press were against the rule. Only 23 managers said they either favored the rule or believed that it should be tested further. Thirteen offered no opinion.

"It's producing a variety of programming and allowing independent producers to enter the market," said Lee Jason of KFSN, Fresno, Calif. "But it's decreased the quality of programming because independent producers can't gamble with an innovative product. Instead, they stick to tried-and-true formulas, like game shows."

A struggle within the industry could be in the offing. Some stations are losing money from the rule, but others are profiting from it. NBC is seeking to have the rule withdrawn by the FCC, presumably because it has cost the network money.

But the rule has greatly helped the competitive posture and financial standing of another network, ABC.

A number of independent producers are risking money with new shows on the assurance of the FCC that the rule will stay in force.

"While critics assail the rule, saying it has produced a proliferation of game shows, bargain-basement dramas and off-network reruns, the Justice Department has filed suit to take entertainment programming away from the networks altogether. The suit, filed April 14 in Los Angeles, would turn network programming over to advertising agencies and independent producers in much the same way as does the prime time access rule.

The networks have mixed reactions to the prime time rule. Julian Goodman, president of NBC, is leading the fight to revoke the rule, which he calls "unrealistic" and says has produced "absurd results."

But at ABC, a spokesman said, "We think it needs another year for everyone to take a look at it. The first year was an experiment. A shakedown year with a lot of waivers."

"There's no question that it helped ABC. The economy was bad, cigarettes were gone. It reduced our inventory in a slow market time and we were able to weed out a lot of losers."

NBC said that according to the Nielsen reports, over-all viewing from October to February declined 8.4 per cent as compared with last year in the 7:30-8 p.m. period. Network affiliates report viewing off even more—12 per cent for the access time period.

Independent stations, however, increased viewing 36 per cent.

The networks also said the access rule has caused a significant decline in viewing of the evening news shows. NBC said the three network share during the news shows declined from 85 per cent last year to 77 per cent.

Few of the shows offered to television stations through syndication or barter—a means by which a sponsor offers a show free in exchange for a few minutes of advertising time—were innovative or noteworthy, many of the managers felt. One show that was, "Story Theatre," met with only modest station and audience acceptance.

Slander Attempt In Impersonation

KANSAS CITY (AP) — An attorney for Wayne G. Farmer says hospital officials in Canton, Ohio, will be sued for recovery of wages and damages.

The officials have said Farmer, of Independence, Mo., impersonated a physician when he took a job as medical director and administrator of the Molly Stark Hospital in Canton, using

A common ground of agreement by nearly all of the station managers was that the new shows were not as good as those offered by the networks. The public apparently agreed, because over-all viewing during the early evening access time declined in the Nielsen ratings.

The two most popular shows were "Lawrence Welk" and "Hee Haw," with new shows offered to stations by barter after cancellation by the networks.

DEATH NOTICES

Dennis Wayne Frasher

WINDSOR — Dennis Wayne Frasher, 38, died Tuesday at Nevada, Mo., following a long illness.

He was born at Windsor on Jan. 12, 1934, son of Mrs. Naomi Laughman Frasher and the late Carl Frasher.

He was a member of the First Christian Church, Windsor.

Survivors include his mother, of the home, and several aunts and uncles.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at the church with the Rev. George H. Alexander officiating.

Burial will be in Laurel Oak Cemetery.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Huston-Hadley Funeral Home, Windsor.

Maude Alice Gibson

Maude Alice Gibson, 88, Kansas City, died Tuesday at Rest Haven Nursing Home.

She was born May 9, 1883, the daughter of James and Jennie Traw Gibson.

She was a member of the Independence Avenue Christian Church, Kansas City.

Survivors include two brothers, John Gibson, Kansas City; Robert Gibson, Rogers, Ark.; three sisters, Mrs. Autie Belshe, Richland; Mrs. Ione Seiber, Hardy, Ark., and Mrs. W. L. Gordon, LaMonte.

Graveside services will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at Richland Cemetery.

Nephews will serve as pallbearers.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Moore Funeral Home, LaMonte.

Major Helen B. Ellis

Funeral services and burial for Major Helen B. Ellis, 71, Peru, Ind., who died at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at the home of her son, Robert C. Ellis Jr., 914 East Seventh, will be held Thursday in Peru, Ind.

Error In Address
Of Board Member

It was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's Democrat that C. R. Leppert, a member of the State Fair Community College board of trustees, lives in Warsaw.

Leppert lives and works in Kansas City, but owns a home and business property in Lincoln. He is employed as a technician at Lakeside Hospital in Kansas City, and lives at 9920 Oakdale Drive there. His son is a student at Center High School. Leppert has no Lincoln phone number, but is listed in the Kansas City phone directory.

When contacted Tuesday in Kansas City and asked about where he lived, Leppert replied, "It's a dual affair. We spend part of our time here and part of our time there (Lincoln)." Leppert added that he intends to move to the Sedalia or Lincoln area next year.

Leppert has been nominated twice for election as president of the SFCC board of trustees. Both elections have ended in deadlock, however, and William C. Hopkins of Sedalia still retains the office.

According to the minutes of the board of trustees, Leppert has missed 41 per cent of the board's meetings over the last four years.

Driver Is Injured
In Auto Accident

A Sedalian received minor injuries and a summons for failing to yield the right of way in connection with a two-car accident at 24th and Ingram at 5:22 p.m. Tuesday.

Mrs. Jewel Miles, 1008 West Tenth, suffered a laceration to her cheek when the 1967 Chevrolet she was driving west on 24th was in collision with a 1971 Chevrolet pickup truck driven south on Ingram by Clarence W. Riley, Route 3, Cole Camp.

Both vehicles were extensively damaged and towed from the scene.

Henry D. Hume

Funeral services for Henry B. Hume, 85, Route 2, who died at 1:23 p.m. Monday at the Bothwell Hospital, were held at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at the McLaughlin Funeral Home with the Rev. Charles Halbrook officiating.

He was born June 20, 1886, in Calloway County, the son of Paul and Sena Brian Hume. He was raised and educated in Calloway and Boone Counties and in 1910 moved to Pettis County. He married Marie Walje in 1912. She preceded him in death in November, 1970. He was engaged in farming all of his life.

He was a member of the New Hope Baptist Church.

Survivors include two sons, Eugene Hume, Route 2; Jack Hume, St. Joseph; two daughters, Mrs. Laneta Lower, 1600 South Clarendon Road; Mrs. Betty Smith, Route 1; eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Pauline Gelken and Mr. Golsten furnished the music.

Burial was in Crown Hill Cemetery.

Speedy
Apollo
Return

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Apollo 16's astronauts said as they hurtled back toward earth today that it would be premature to speculate on what lunar secrets their moon rocks will unlock.

"It ain't good science," commander John W. Young said. "We have to wait until we get back to the laboratory to find out what we've got."

Charles M. Duke Jr., who explored the Descartes mountain plateau with Young, said "Anything we would say would be pure speculation at this stage."

The exchange came during a 20-minute conversation in which capsule communicator Dr. Tony England, a scientist-astronaut, relayed questions from geologists.

England told them that during a news conference from space later today reporters were expected to press them to draw some conclusions about the rocks and samples they collected during 71 hours on the moon.

In the South Pacific, where the carrier Ticonderoga waits to recover the astronauts, the weather forecast for the 2:44 p.m. EST splashdown time Thursday called for unlimited visibility except for a few thunderheads, seas of 1 to 3 feet, light winds and a temperature of 84 degrees.

"That's the best news we've heard in a long time," commented Thomas K. Mattingly II when he received the report.

The astronauts were in good spirits as they awoke for their final full day in space today.

During the half-hour news conference, a capsule communicator will read to them questions prepared by newsmen covering the flight from the Manned Spacecraft Center. It will be televised to Mission Control.

Young and Duke were to be questioned about their report Monday that they did not think they found any volcanic rock "to speak of." That had been the main goal as they conducted man's first exploration in the moon's highlands, which constitute nearly 80 per cent of the surface.

But Mission Control geologists who watched on television and listened to the moon walkers' descriptions are certain they are bringing back volcanic evidence in the 245 pounds of rocks and soil they collected.

The consensus here is that volcanic processes during the early history of the moon took a different form than those on earth and Young and Duke thus were unable to recognize rocks as volcanic.

On Monday, Mattingly took a deep space walk 199,000 miles from home. He eased through the open hatch of the command ship Casper and moved on handrails 15 feet to the rear of the spacecraft to recover more than a mile of film from two cameras.

City In Answer
In Damage Suit

The city filed answers Tuesday in Pettis County Circuit Court to allegations of Luther Roy White, Indianapolis, Ind., concerning a damage suit pressed by White from injuries he allegedly received in a Sept. 15, 1970, motorcycle accident at 16th and Limit when his cycle struck a raised manhole cover involved in road construction in that area.

The city said in its answers Tuesday that the Missouri State Highway Commission orally ordered that the manhole covers be raised to conform to surveying techniques employed by the commission.

White seeks damages from injuries sustained in the accident, claiming that the raised manhole cover constituted a roadway hazard.

judge because "I figured that I could be of some use in the county."

Married and the father of three, Shelly is a graduate of Smith-Cotton High School. He served three years in the Marine Corps after completing his education.

Shelly cited his experience as a member of Masonic Lodge 236; past president of Khouri League Baseball and his long affiliation with the Junior Football League as examples of his community involvement.

Heavy State Slate
In August Primary

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri voters will have ample opportunity to pick and choose among a full slate of statewide candidates in the August primary.

When the filing deadline arrived Tuesday at 5 p.m., a total of 18 candidates—11 Democrats, five Republicans, one nonpartisan and one independent—had filed for the nomination for governor.

The second most-sought-after nomination was for lieutenant governor—with 14 candidates in the running.

Democratic candidates will face primary opposition in every statewide race this August, but three Republican candidates will run unopposed in races for nominations as secretary of state, attorney general and treasurer.

Independent and nonpartisan candidates filed for nominations as governor and lieutenant governor but not for any other statewide office.

Those filed for governor are:

Democrats: (1) Edward L. Dowd of St. Louis; William S. Morris of Kansas City; John Noel of St. Louis; Robert D. Newbury of O'Fallon; Earl R. Blackwell of Hillsboro; William M. Thomas of Overland; Joseph P. Teasdale of Kansas City; LeRoy Schantz of Springfield; Jim Thomas of Branson; Howard H. Sims of St. Louis; and Charles Baker of Pleasant Hill.

Republicans: (5) Harvey F. Euge of St. Louis; R. J. "Bus" King of Clayton; Christopher "Kit" Bond of Mexico; Gene McNary of Afton; and Stephen Burns of Des Peres.

Transplant
Operation
For Woman

Mrs. Alice Simmons, the 24-year-old Sedalia woman who has suffered from a gradually worsening kidney disease, received a kidney transplant Monday at the University of Missouri Medical Center in Columbia and her condition Wednesday was listed as satisfactory, according to Dr. Kenneth Keown, medical director of the hospital.

The operation, which occurred late Monday afternoon, was the third kidney transplant ever performed at the University of Missouri Medical Center. The other two, both performed Feb. 8 of this year, resulted satisfactorily according to Dr. Keown.

Mrs. Simmons will be under close observation for the next 30 days and, following her dismissal, will return to the Medical Center weekly for treatments. Dr. Keown.

Mrs. Simmons, who resides with her husband, David, and four-old-son, at 316 West 11th, had been using a kidney machine for six hour periods three days each week since September. The machine was furnished by the Kidney Foundation.

Miss Shirley Morley, 23½ South Stewart, a friend of the Simons' who spearheaded several community benefits to raise funds for the kidney patient, said over $5,000 has been collected locally, and will be used to defray medical expenses.

Great Victory
McGovern Says

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern gained the "great victory" he predicted in the Massachusetts Democratic primary, calling it "a victory for peace—not war."

"Now let's go to Ohio," the South Dakotan told his supporters at a victory celebration in his Boston headquarters here for the progressive center of the Democratic party.

McGovern took the lead when the first precincts were reported in the popularity poll and kept it. He led for all 102 first-ballot votes at the Democratic National Convention.

President Nixon was the runaway victor in the Republican preference vote, forging his victory around labor and black support in Philadelphia, at Pittsburgh and other industrial towns of this heavily unionized state.

McGovern also led in the race for the state's 137 elected delegates, with 57 pledged or favorable to him. Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota, who was a close fourth in the popular vote count, led in 37 delegate races. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, a few votes ahead of McGovern in the popular count, led in 29 delegate contests. Forty-five additional delegates are to be chosen later, 27 by the party leaders.

But the vote startled the politicians two ways:

The second-place finish of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace. He had spent less than 24 hours in the state and raised more money than he spent.

The virtual third-place tie between Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, once expected to be the easy winner, and Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota. Muskie had campaigned in the state and had the backing of both Gov. Milton J. Shapp and the Philadelphia Democratic City Committee. McGovern had done little campaigning in Pennsylvania, concentrating on Massachusetts where he finished first.

Humphrey's three chief rivals each collected about 21 per cent of the vote.

The breakdown from 97 per cent of the 9,577 precincts was:

Humphrey 455,819; Wallace 272,941; Muskie 266,512; McGovern 265,324; and Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, 39,180, or about 3 per cent.

There was no presidential balloting on the Republican side.

On the Democratic side, there were 137 delegate contests, with 45 other delegates to be chosen later—27 by the winners and 18 by the party leaders—for the

Associated Press Elects Officers

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Miller has been elected chairman of the board of The Associated Press, a new post created to make AP titles more consistent with those of other organizations.

Miller, chairman and chief executive officer of the Gannett newspaper group, had been AP president since 1963.

Other officers elected at a board meeting here Tuesday were Richard L. Jones of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune, first vice chairman of the board, and D. Tennant Bryan of the Richmond (Va.) News Leader and Times Dispatch, second vice chairman.

Wes Gallagher remains AP's general manager and assumes the additional title of president.

The board also designated these titles for officers of the corporation under a change in the bylaws approved by the AP membership at the annual meeting Monday:

Jack Paar Program Personal

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Prime-time television—with networks, film studios, producers, creators, writers and scores of others in the finished product—is not the happiest hunting ground for the rugged individualist.

Jack Paar, if nothing else, is a distinct personality. His "African Diary" on NBC Tuesday night was, for better or worse, a personal program.

As an hour of television, however, it racked up as Paar's least effective production. The quality of the photography and sound was fuzzy and unimaginative. Jack rushed through the sequences, particularly the interviews.

A number of his elaborate sight gags fizzled, but he used them anyway. In one he staged a black-tie formal dinner party in a tent in the middle of the bush which was scheduled to be invaded by a wild donkey. It looked obviously staged—the diners were seated on three sides of a table so the camera had a clear shot of everybody. Worst of all, the donkey was the tamest guest in the tent.

Jack's interest in Joy Adamson and the "Born Free" lions was further explored, but Jack's interview with Mrs. Adamson was so hurried and jumbled it was hard to understand either of them.

In spite of everything, Paar did wheedle a good quote when he asked Mrs. Adamson what she was afraid of.

"Loneliness," she replied and Paar wisely quit while he was ahead. And in some moments Paar's delicious sense of the ridiculous came through, including his throw-away report about the English lady in Africa who found she needed a permit from the local department of agriculture to get her shipment of shoe trees from London.

The program was not, even by Paar's standards, professional. But at a time when most television comes off Hollywood production lines, it probably is important to have around some people such as Paar who are using the medium for personal expression.

Harry T. Montgomery, vice president, deputy general manager and secretary; Keith Fuller, vice president and assistant secretary; Stanley M. Swinton, vice president and assistant treasurer; Robert Eunson, vice president and assistant secretary; Conrad Fink, vice president; David L. Bowen, vice president, and James F. Tomlinson, vice president and treasurer.

There will be no changes in the lines of authority or functions of these executives.

At the news cooperative's annual meeting, the membership filled four vacancies on the nominating committee with the election of the following:

Thomas P. Dolan, White Plains (N.Y.) Reporter-Dispatch, Eastern Division; Harold W. Andersen, Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald, Central Division; Dorrance D. Roderick, El Paso (Tex.) Times, re-elected from the Southern Division, and Alex de Bakesy, San Diego (Calif.) Tribune, re-elected from the Western Division.

Incumbents on the nominating committee, each with another year to serve, are K. Prescott Low, Quincy (Mass.) Patriot Ledger, Eastern Division; Frank Batten, Norfolk, (Va.) Ledger-Star, Southern Division; Daniel J. Mahoney Jr., Dayton (Ohio) Daily News, Central Division, and William H. Cowles 3rd, Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review, Western Division.

Cowles was elected chairman and Batten secretary.

John F. McGee, Charleston (W. Va.) Daily Mail, and three incumbents were named to the auditing committee.

The incumbent are Joe M. Dealey, Dallas (Tex.) Morning News; Charles H. Withers, Rochester (Minn.) Post-Bulletin, chairman, and Frank S. Hoag Jr., Pueblo (Colo.) Chieftain, secretary.

Commissioners Can't Control Railroad Cops

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners has no authority to regulate railroad police licensed by the state highway patrol. Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth held in an opinion issued today.

The opinion was requested by Richard M. Miller, secretary of the St. Louis board. Miller asked if the board's powers did not preempt the licensing authority and give the board the authority to regulate railroad police training requirements, carrying of firearms and uniforms.

Danforth pointed out that railroad police exercise their law enforcement powers on railroad property in all cities and counties.

Mrs. Bill Bailey, wife of Optimist Bill Bailey, showed members of the Noon Optimist Club Tuesday how to make neckties as part of program arranged by J. C. Patton, program chairman.

Fred Arbogast told the group that next week was Law Enforcement Week and that representatives from local law enforcement departments were expected to hear a program presented by an FBI agent here. Kenny Schilb, president, presided. The invocation was given by Fred Biggs.

Curfew Has Ended For Harrisonville

HARRISONVILLE, Mo. (AP) — City officials in Harrisonville, Mo., have ended a 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew which was imposed last Friday following a shooting incident in which four men died.

Mayor M.O. Raine said police and civil defense personnel had informed him the situation was calm Tuesday and business back to normal. Police said although the curfew was ended they planned continued patrols by additional police.

Killed in a shooting spree were police officers Donald L. Marler, 26, and Francis E. Wirt, 24. Charles E. Simpson, 25, Holden, Mo., who killed the officers and then shot himself. The fourth man, Orville T. Allen, 58, Garden City, Mo., died Monday night from wounds suffered in the incident.

Funeral services for Allen are to be held at 2 p.m. Thursday in Garden City.

Speculate on Nixon Trip to Moscow

An AP News Analysis
By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

It is easy to envisage a set of circumstances that could make it impossible for President Nixon to go through with his visit to Moscow next month.

The latest mission of the participant Henry A. Kissinger can arouse speculation that the current North Vietnamese offensive in South Vietnam could produce such circumstances.

There's evidence that neither Moscow nor Washington wants that to happen. Each seems eager for the summit to go on.

But the way the President's adviser announced his secret four-day stay in Moscow suggested that Vietnam was high on the list of subjects to be probed before the trip.

Moscow continues to advertise a determination to give

North Vietnam and the Viet Cong "all necessary aid."

That aid has been enormous.

Initial arrangements for the Nixon visit were made at a time of relative lull in Vietnam. The U.S. troop withdrawal program was proceeding on schedule.

When Nixon was about to visit China, a North Vietnamese military buildup was noted. It might have been expected that an offensive would come to embarrass the Chinese. It didn't happen.

What's going on? Kissinger could well ask. Why an offensive now, when it can embarrass the Russians? It has been going on almost a month and the North Vietnamese are believed capable of sustaining it for yet another month. Should it rack up a clear major victory and establish, say, a capital for the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government that would make the Nixon visit almost impossible.

Would Hanoi deliberately set out to embarrass its protector and benefactor? Would the offensive have taken place if Moscow had warned against it?

These are puzzling questions. Kissinger may not have received satisfactory answers. He adopted a Soviet device in describing the talks as "frank." which in Moscow would mean they got nowhere.

Leonid Brezhnev, the party general secretary who is to meet with Nixon, set the tone March 20 in a notably mild speech that dwelt on the Soviet intention to "improve the political climate of the planet."

The Russians want the summit for a variety of weighty reasons, some connected with the economy. Perhaps the Vietnamese did, after all, deliberately set out to put the Kremlin on a spot. Perhaps Hanoi is wary and distrustful of what might happen at the summit. But unless Hanoi can produce a truly dramatic victory, it seems likely that the May summit will be held as planned.

Assistant Files

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Jackson County Assistant Prosecuting Attorney James M. Shockey has filed for the Democratic nomination for county prosecutor.

Joseph P. Teasdale, prosecuting attorney who is running for governor, is reported by some employees in his office to have given tacit approval to another assistant, Tom Cox Jr.

Candidates Critical On Revamp

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — Four Republican candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor have criticized what they called the failure of past Democratic administrations to reorganize state government.

State Auditor Christopher Bond, Rep. R. J. King, St. Louis County Prosecutor Gene McNary and Rep. Steven Burns spoke Tuesday night to about 100 members of the Clayton Township Republican Club.

The candidates agreed that the need for government reorganization will be the chief issue in November.

"The governor can see that changes are made or blocked," Bond said. "We have a governor today who has used his full power to block every recommendation for change in state government."

King said Missouri "is on the verge of bankruptcy as the present legislative session nears its close."

Burns called for radical changes in taxing methods, citing an earlier proposal he made to set up a nationwide revenue sharing plan, based on a single federal tax.

McNary called for re-establishment of neighborhood control and standards to bring about a reduced crime rate.

Question Fireboat Defects

GRAFTON, Ill. (AP) — Officials of the Grafton Boat Co. say they will go to Boston, Mass., next week to iron out defects in a $371,000 fireboat recently delivered to the Boston fire department.

Boston Commissioner James H. Kelly said his department will not accept the boat, "The Firefighter," until the Grafton, Ill., firm makes the 76-foot steel hull craft seaworthy.

The company, located on the Mississippi River about 25 miles north of St. Louis, completed building two fireboats last fall—the Firefighter and an 80-foot fireboat for the Massachusetts Port Authority. Both were delivered in December.

Boston Fire Chief George Paul has said the Firefighter has five general defects: the cooling system tanks are made of copper instead of an alloy; the water boom tower isn't mounted properly; the sanitary system does not work properly; the electrical system malfunctions; and there are leaks in the deckhouse.

William Evans, vice president of the 35-year-old boat company, said Tuesday some of the defects are the result of changes in original plans that were ordered by the city of Boston.

"We've been doing what we can to remedy the defects. They've been running the boat and things keep popping up. It's these kind of things that require constant maintenance," Evans said.

"I'm confident we can sit down and work these problems out," he said. "Like any complex machine there are items that will malfunction."

The Firefighter is believed to be the first fireboat constructed in the United States in the last decade.

Evans said the 80-foot boat is reported operating without serious problems.

Rescue Workmen From Scaffold

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Two workmen were rescued reluctantly from their perch on scaffolding 15 floors high on the Equitable Building Monday.

The workers, Dan Troll of Florissant and Larry Wade of Jennings — said they were caulking windows when they noticed several youngsters leaning on the building beneath them.

Troll and Wade yelled and motioned for the youngsters to move away, and someone misinterpreted the gestures as a cry for help.

Three fire engines and four police cars converged on the building. "The more we waved and shouted, the faster they worked sending that ladder up after us," said Troll after he had been rescued. "It was awfully embarrassing."

"We've got about three weeks' more work," said Wade. "I think I'm going to make a big sign saying, 'Thanks, but we're just fine,' in case this happens again."

Hermerding Seeks Post In County

(Democrat-Capital Service)

SWEET SPRINGS — Werner Hermerding, 65, a former postmaster here, announced this week he will seek the Republican nomination for associate judge of the Saline County Court, representing the Second District.

The district includes the townships of Cambridge, Miami, Grand Pass, Elmwood and Salt Pond.

Hermerding was born near St. Louis, son of the late Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Hermerding. He graduated from the St. Louis County Grade School; Wilcox, Neb., High School, and the Kansas City College of Commerce.

He has lived in Saline County for 44 years, residing variously in Blackburn, Marshall and Sweet Springs. He is married to the former Ruth Vogelsmeier and they have two children, James Hermerding, Auburn Heights, Mich., and Janice, a medical technologist who recently returned from Saigon.

"I am vitally interested in all democratic ideals that offer good government for the safeguard of democracy and freedom," he said when he announced his candidacy. "If nominated and elected, I will accept responsibility to achieve the public service for our county that will benefit all citizens," he added.

Boston Commissioner James H. Kelly said his department will not accept the boat, "The Firefighter," until the Grafton, Ill., firm makes the 76-foot steel hull craft seaworthy.

On Plastic Surgery

Questions Most Often Asked

(Second of Two Parts)
By HELEN HENNESSY
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Doctors Victor Royce Syracuse and Ralph L. Dicker, who founded the New York Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery Group, are eminent surgeons who can speak with authority on their subject.

Along with many other affiliations, Dr. Syracuse is emeritus clinical professor of ophthalmology, New York Polyclinic Graduate Medical School, associate surgeon of facial plastic surgery at French Hospital, N.Y., and instructor of facial plastic surgery at Manhattan General Hospital for 18 years.

Dr. Dicker is affiliated with the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery and founder member of the International Congress of Cosmetic Plastic Surgery, Rome. Both surgeons are participating lecturers in International congresses of facial plastic surgery and have lectured and shown their original films of cosmetic techniques in Japan, Russia, East Africa, Italy, Ethiopia and Greece. They are well equipped to answer the questions most asked about plastic surgery. And perhaps some of the things you have been curious about are answered here by them.

Q—If I need a nose lift, a face lift and an eye lift and can only afford one of them, which should I do first?

A—if you need a nose lift, that should be done first because it can make you look 10 years younger immediately. But you have to talk it out with your physician. Some people think they need nose correction and it isn't the nose that's wrong at all. It could be that the chin is the problem. Any correction of the nose is always done in relation to the rest of the face.

The Greeks," Dr. Syracuse said, "had an ideal 'look' and took measurements. But these would be of no use, for example, to the Orientals. If we took 100 people and made measurements as an anthropologist does, then we could say to the patient, 'Look, this is what you need.'"

Q—At what age may a patient consider a face lift?

A—at about 35. It's not too young when you think about what people are going through to get and keep their jobs. (A frightening commentary on our way of life.)

Q—Is the operation painful?

A—No. A bit uncomfortable, that's all.

Q—Can the scars be seen?

A—one cut is in the scalp and can't be seen. The second is in front of the ears—fine stitches and no pull. It's done along the natural cheek groove and scars disappear after healing. Next is behind the ear. The fourth line hugs the ear halfway up and can barely be seen.

Q—How long does the improved appearance last?

A—Five to 10 years.

Q—Can the operation be repeated?

A—Yes. The more times you have it done, the more permanent it becomes and the better it looks. You have only the original scars. Tension is on the muscles, not on the skin.

Q—What is average cost of a complete face lift?

A—About $2,500. But a complete face lift is not usually necessary. The doctors do what they call "spot welding." (Popular Mechanics must be their favorite reading matter.)

Q—Can eye-lid surgery be performed along with a face lift?

A—Yes, if the patient wants it. But doctors don't favor it for the surgery takes too long a time.

Q—Can a woman change the shape of her eyes?

A—Yes. Westerners seem to want slanty eyes. And Japanese want the Western look. Japanese doctors often remove a piece of tissue at the corner and sew it up in reverse.

Q—What is the average cost of rhinoplasty (nose surgery)?

A—Approximately $750. Ten years ago it was $550. But that's inflation for you. Food was cheaper then, too.

The latest plastic surgery, according to the doctors, will be making a whole ear. But even they concede that will be a tough challenge.

For a final note on appearance improvement there is dermal abrasion. It is effective for fine wrinkles, pigmentation, acne scars. Mild cases need only one operation. Severe cases may need several.

Sandpaper or steel wool is run up and down the skin to get fine particles off at a rapid rate. The skin is frozen first to ensure rigidity. It may sound awful, but the results are very rewarding. It takes only from 15 to 30 minutes to do a whole face. The procedure is not painful. There is only mild postoperative pain and no makeup can be used for two weeks. The crust on the face can be removed with soap and water and lubricants. It costs $400-$500 and it's about two weeks before you look presentable.

Seems like an awful trial to endure when you could just grow old gracefully. But people are living longer and have to work longer in a youth oriented society.

A—Five to 10 years.

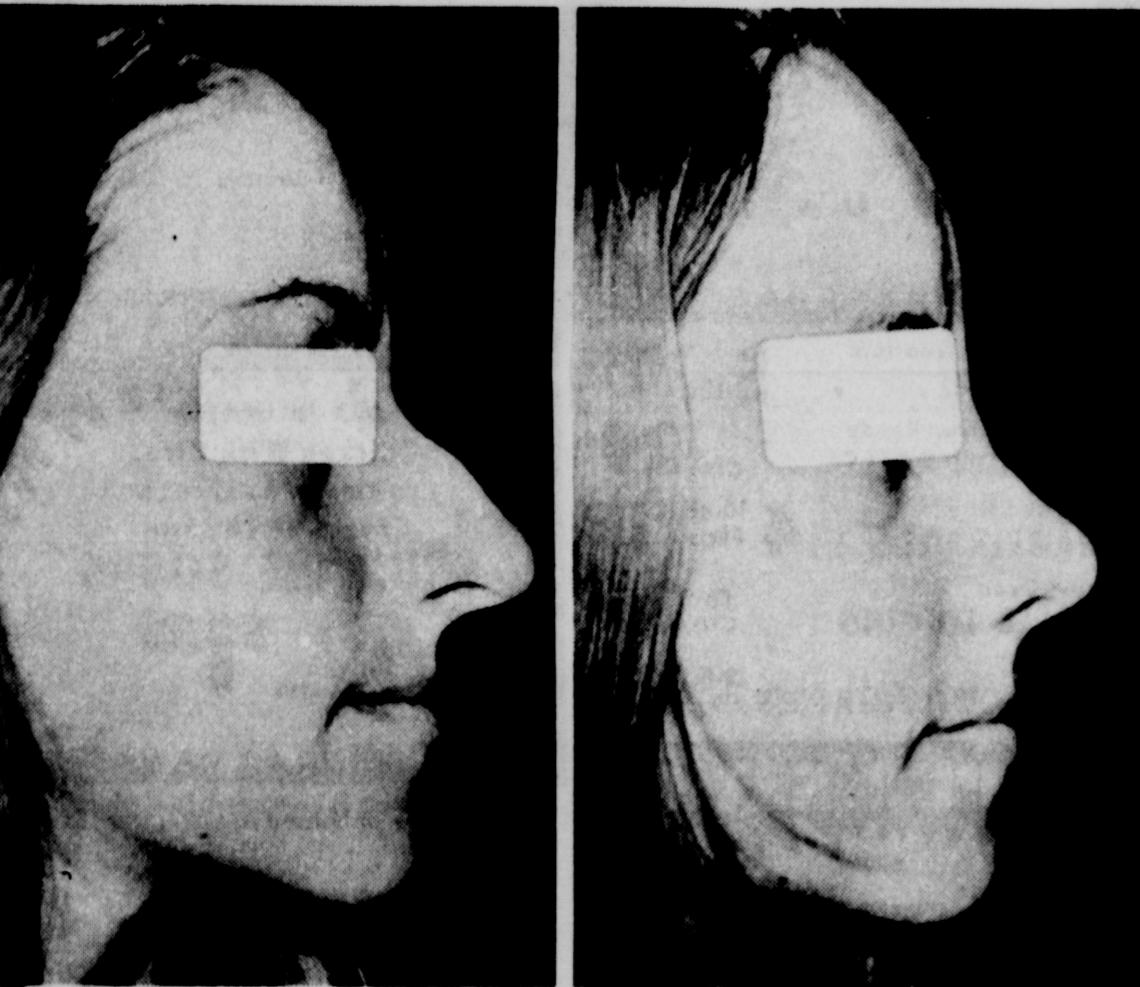

Q—Can the operation be repeated?

A—Yes. The more times you have it done, the more permanent it becomes and the better it looks. You have only the original scars. Tension is on the muscles, not on the skin.

Q—What is average cost of a complete face lift?

A—About $2,500. But a complete face lift is not usually necessary. The doctors do what they call "spot welding." (Popular Mechanics must be their favorite reading matter.)

Q—Can eye-lid surgery be

Lack of Postmark Causes Pet Peeve

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is also with the Post Office Department. I work for a large insurance company and it is very important that the DATE of the postmark be readable. It is almost unbelievable how many are not. Many times the year and month can be read but the day and month is not clear or entirely missing. I would like to see this corrected for with the cost of postage being what it is. I think we deserve better service. Thanks for hearing me out. — BETTY PACE.

DEAR POLLY — V. N. could doubtless remove the lime deposits from her shower stall as I do. Close the drain and pour vinegar, full strength, on the floor of the stall and let it stand for a few hours. Use a scrubbing pad to clean. If the first time does not work, repeat the process. — MRS. H. L. G.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — Years ago we used to combine kerosene with some other ingredient. (I cannot remember what it was), dipped cloths in this and let them dry to make wonderful dusting cloths. This is much less expensive than buying the commercial dusting products so I would appreciate hearing if someone knows how to make this solution. — MRS. H. L. G.

DEAR POLLY — To cure the hiccoughs, take (eat) a teaspoon of regular granulated sugar. I find that it works. — JANICE

DEAR JANICE — It was a coincidence that your letter came to my desk just a couple of days after one of my grandchildren had proved this to me. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My children like a little chili on their hog dogs so I keep it frozen. But since it is not practical to thaw all of it when just a little is needed, I looked around for a better way. I freeze the chili in ice-cube trays. After it is frozen, I remove the cubes and put them in a plastic container that can be stored in the freezer. Whenever a small amount is needed, I take out and thaw the required number of cubes. — SHIRLEY

Altrusa
Conference
Is Held

The 16th annual district conference of Altrusa International met Friday and Saturday at the Sheraton Hotel in Little Rock, Ark.

The delegate elected to represent the local club was Miss Sue Heckart, president elect. Other members attending from the Sedalia Altrusa Club were Mrs. Mildred Goddard, Miss Opal O'Briant and Mrs. Betty Pace.

The conference opened on Friday morning with sessions devoted to officer and chairman work shops. Governor Ethel Greer, Pittsburg, Kan., presided over the conference and was assisted by district officers, board members and committee chairmen. About 210 persons registered from Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma.

The international representative was Miss LaVora Conklin, Detroit, Mich., first vice-president of Altrusa International. She was the guest of honor

Q — When we voted on the bonds for Town & Country Shoes, we were not told they would be in the retail business. Is this fair to the voters and other retail businesses? Is it legal? — Mrs. F. M.

A — Hot Line contacted E. N. Healey, controller at Town & Country, who said, "The company did not have any thought of operating a retail store in conjunction with our factory when the bond issue proposal was presented to the voters, so no mention was made at that time."

"The idea only came up a few months ago, and from the public reaction we are frankly sorry we did not go into this years sooner," he said. According to Healey, the company's lease agreement with the city gives the firm "the right...to use the facility for any and all purposes allowed by law."

Healey said he saw the move as a boost to the city since "the store is located within the city limits, so 1 per cent city sales tax is collected on all transactions." Healey also said, "This kind of store invariably brings in many shoppers from outside Sedalia who not only buy at our store, but at other retail establishments while they are here, thus helping local retailers in general."

Q — Who paid traveling expenses for Bill Hall, director of industrial development, for his recent trip to Cape Kennedy? — O. B.

A — Hall told Hot Line the bulk of the expenses incurred during the trip were paid for by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration since it had invited him to the Cape as a representative of the city. He said he paid for some other expenses from his own pocket and that the city covered expenses on his transportation from Atlanta to Kansas City. Hall said he stopped in Atlanta to contact an industrial prospect who had expressed interest in the Sedalia area.

Q — I noticed in a recent story in the paper that legislation has to be passed to refund state income tax money. Isn't the income tax that is withheld from employees kept in a reserve fund during the year like the federal taxes are? — Mrs. M. H.

A — There is no special fund in which collected income taxes are deposited, according to Rep. Joe Rains. He told Hot Line that article 3, section 36 of the Missouri Constitution requires that "all revenue collected and money received by the state shall go into the treasury and the general assembly shall have no power to divert the same or to permit the withdrawal of money from the treasury except in pursuance of appropriations made by law."

Rains added that besides this, section 136.035 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri of 1969 states "the director of revenue from funds appropriated shall refund any overpayment or erroneous payment of any tax which the state is authorized to collect."

Q — Why is there not a "no parking" sign at the corner of Fifth and Engineer where there is a tavern? Beer trucks and other trucks constantly pull in that area and create a blind corner on Engineer street. There is plenty of parking space in the back of the tavern. — Mrs. H. P.

A — The tavern manager agreed that trucks do park there, creating a blind corner. It has been a practice for several years, since it is convenient for truck drivers to unload cartons there, he pointed out. However, he added, he is in favor of a "no parking" sign there.

Police Chief William Miller told Hot Line that the problem will be discussed at the next meeting of the Traffic Committee, of which he is a member.

Nonpublic Schools Issue Heated Up Once Again

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There were no classes scheduled today for more than 500 students at St. Pius X High School in suburban Kansas City.

Those students and some teachers and parents planned to spend the day on a 15-mile fund-raising walk in an effort to keep their school operating at its present level for the rest of the year.

The Rev. John J. McCormick, principal, says the school gets 79 per cent of the money it needs through tuition payments and subsidies from the Kansas City-St. Joseph Roman Catholic Diocese. The rest — well, that's where the walking comes in.

St. Pius X's financial plight has many parallels at private and parochial schools in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

And because students at a nonpublic school that closes are quite likely to wind up at a public one, the potential effects extend to all elementary and secondary education in Mid-America.

In a speech in Philadelphia early this month, President Nixon said nonpublic schools face a nationwide crisis. He warned that a total collapse of the nonpublic school system could mean new costs to the American taxpayer of $3 billion annually for school operation and up to $10 billion for school construction.

The President said much of the burden of such a collapse would fall on the largest cities, such as Chicago and New York.

Officials point out, however, that several school districts in Mid-America would also be caught in the squeeze.

"It would depend largely on the community involved," said Cecil Stanley, Nebraska education commissioner. "In some there would be no problem whatsoever. In others there would be at least a temporary problem."

Vincent DeCoursey, executive director of the Kansas Catholic Conference, envisions "varying degrees of crisis" from "none for the school districts without nonpublic schools" to "chaotic for school districts already in trouble with facilities and bond issues."

He adds: "Without some type of aid the crisis is coming within the next couple of years."

Statistics indicated a marked decline in nonpublic school enrollment throughout Mid-America during recent years while the number of students in public schools has generally risen substantially.

The decrease in Catholic school enrollment "will continue and in fact will accelerate without some massive state or federal aid," says Msgr. Thomas O'Brien, chairman of the Missouri Catholic Conference's Department of Education.

Msgr. O'Brien, like many other Catholic school officials, is pinning most of his hopes on Washington.

Nixon has promised "specific measures designed to preserve the nonpublic school system" will be presented to Congress.

The outlook for state aid, meanwhile, is considerably less promising. Last week the U. S. Supreme Court upheld Missouri's constitutional ban on state aid to church-related schools.

In Nebraska, the state constitution has been interpreted to mean that even the distribution of federal Title I funds through the state to private schools violates its provisions for separation of church and state.

A constitutional amendment that would permit channeling of federal money through the state to parochial schools comes up for a public vote in Nebraska May 9, but the state's voters have repeatedly refused in the past to change their constitution on this subject.

What's causing the parochial schools' financial troubles?

"The problem is the increase in costs, not in raising money," says Paul O'Hara, legislative assistant to Catholic school superintendents in Nebraska.

Bill Cox, research assistant at the Missouri Catholic Conference, says costs have jumped 600 per cent since 1950.

Beyond inflation, DeCoursey notes, there are other factors contributing heavily to rising costs within the Catholic school system: Reduction in the size of classes, and the substitution of lay teachers, with their much higher salaries, for priests and nuns.

In Oklahoma, the controversy over busing in public schools has complicated the picture — notably at Oklahoma City and Tulsa, where it is credited with touching off a run to private schools.

Elsewhere in the five-state area, however, officials say busing has had little effect.

Whatever their reasons for enrolling their children at a nonpublic school, parents are finding the bill has skyrocketed.

At Hayden, the Catholic High school in Topeka, Kan., for example, tuition has climbed from $50 in 1956 to 1972 levels of $230 for Catholic freshmen and sophomores; $255 for Catholic juniors and seniors; and $630 for non-Catholics.

Says Msgr. O'Brien: "Tuition is about as high as we can raise it without putting ourselves out of reach of the middle-class family."

However bleak the outlook, most nonpublic school officials retain a measure of optimism.

"I think the situation is critical," said Father James Dawson, superintendent in the Southeast Nebraska Diocese. "But we do feel there is real hope ahead (for federal aid)."

"It's going to be very difficult. But we've seen the Catholic school system continue under very difficult circumstances in the past. The people are more dedicated today to these schools than ever before in the past."

A capsule look at the situation, by states:

IOWA — Parochial school enrollment down from 96,726 in 1961-62 to 70,269 in 1971-72; public school enrollment up from 589,499 to 660,007 over some period.

KANSAS — Nonpublic school enrollment 49,259 in 1960-61, down by 1970-71 to 36,715; public school enrollment holding steady at close to 500,000 in those same years.

MISSOURI — Nonpublic school enrollment down to 111,776 in 1971 from 189,389 in 1967-68 school year. State Department of Education predicted last summer private school closings would continue to add about 15,000 students annually to public schools.

NEBRASKA — Private school enrollment rose from 53,700 in 1960-61 to 57,269 in 1967-68 but has declined since to 47,018. Public school enrollment up to 332,507 this year from 283,665 in 1960-61.

OKLAHOMA — Private school enrollment figures unavailable, but number of accredited schools dropped to 39 from 44 five years ago and 46 ten years ago. Public school enrollment in 1970-71 was 644,853, almost exactly 100,000 more than 10 years ago.

Television Language Shocks Billingsgate

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — The explicit language allowed on British television these days is giving Billingsgate a good name.

"They don't bother sending the Salvation Army lasses around to save us anymore—people hear worse on the telly at home," grumbled Joe Phillips, for 40 years a porter at Billingsgate, the early morning fish market whose name became a synonym for vituperative speech.

"Shocking what they get away with," agreed fish merchant Ted Marshall, from behind a marble slab brimming with bream. "I turn the box off when I hear that sort of thing." In his four decades among the ice and blood splattered aisles of Billingsgate, Marshall admits to having heard phrases that would scale the skin off a stone crab.

"But around here it was always what you might call terms of endearment," put in Derek Dalthe, past president of the 900-member London Fish Merchants Association. "It's not like in the army where every other word was a scorder."

Dawn had yet to silhouette the arches of new London Bridge when this researcher made his way along the rainy Thames docks, armed with cotton ear plugs to stanch the expected flow of abusive syntax. Coarse diction, as a subject of public debate, was everywhere in the air since BBC radio had decided to follow TV's lead in permitting four-letter words and other explicit expletives wherever the plot line dictated.

At Billingsgate, the overriding regret of the merchants, who wholesale the fish, and the mongers, who retail it, was not that the lads were cussing less, but that a permissive society was barely noticing more.

"In the old days," barked Phillips in a hushed diminuendo hardly heard above the rattle of the pushcarts in the cobblestone streets. "the gov'nors always brought distinguished visitors to the city here just to hear the chaps have a go at each other. Now we scarcely get the tourists. They hear worse in the TV lounge back at the hotel."

Billingsgate gained its reputation for boisterous banditage in the early 17th century when fishing fleets, barge pullers, fish wives, Cockney draymen and others doing commerce within the sound of Bow bells competed for equal conversational time. Over the years, a number of expugnists and dockside brawlers came to Billingsgate as porters and made their own colorful contribution to the language.

This place could count more cauliflowerers than Covent Garden," said Ed Dalthe, who for 50 years has been studying the ear structure of his fellow workers. Covent Garden is the vegetable market where dialectician Henry Higgins first attuned himself to Liza Doolittle's dulcet Cockney.

Heart Drug Comes From Vegetation

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have been taking Lanoxin for heart rhythm. I believe my trouble is due to nervous disorders. I have no chest pain, etc. Sometimes I notice no rhythm disturbances for weeks and then it starts again. I take one small tablet of Lanoxin a day by prescription. Is this a dangerous or unsafe medicine to take over several years? I know that stomach gas seems to start my rhythm disturbance.

Dear Reader — Lanoxin is the trade name for one of the digitalis preparations. Most of these products used today, like Lanoxin, are purified drugs.

They have an interesting history. Originally they came from a plant called foxglove and when first given to patients were brewed as a tea. The noted English physician, William Withering, discovered the drug by observing that an old lady in the countryside, who was thought to be a witch, brewed tea for people who had "dropsy" or accumulation of fluid. In many instances the tea relieved them of their disorder. His colleagues thanked him for his trouble by nearly drumming him out of the British medical profession.

Today these medicines remain the single most important drugs that have ever been discovered for heart disease. When the doctor gives them to you it is important to continue to take them exactly as he prescribes and for as long as he recommends. Many individuals need to take these for life and do so without having any major difficulty. The medicine helps to improve the strength of the heart muscle and in this way is our most useful drug in the treatment of heart failure. It is also used in the treatment of certain heart irregularities and apparently your doctor feels that you have the type of irregularity that can be helped by this medicine. This is a fairly common practice.

Under most circumstances the medicine is entirely safe, although when given in too large a dosage it can cause trouble. I would like to point out that these medicines have been used for more than a century and are among the most reliable medicines we have. No medicine, not even aspirin or simple baking soda, is safe if used improperly.

The "stomach gas" you mention can be caused by nervousness, too much coffee and cigarettes. It can also be caused by heart trouble. Remember, even people with heart attacks often have "indigestion" which obscures the real problem. Your stomach gas can trigger irregularities of the heart. Why don't you stop using any coffee, tea, colas and cigarettes? And of course continue the medicine your doctor has given you as long as he recommends it.

Accident In Shooting

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The shooting of a 9-year-old boy by a groundhog hunter has been ruled an accidental homicide "and thus excusable in the legal sense."

Ronald Paul Tracy was killed by a .22 caliber rifle bullet in the head while fishing with three other boys at a railroad bridge in Jackson County Saturday.

The hunter, Auda H. Slagle, 69, told officers he thought he saw a groundhog among some rocks and fired one shot.

Charles J. Fraas Jr., warrant in the prosecutor's office, said Monday the boys were hidden from Slagle's view by a concrete abutment — except for Ronald's head. His head was visible in a corner formed by the abutment and a rock.

"He (Slagle) just saw something furry and fired," Fraas said. There was no way Slagle could have known the boys were there, he added.

"Under these circumstances," Fraas said, "we believe this tragic occurrence can only be classified as an accidental homicide and thus excusable in the legal sense."

Wood Pitches 3rd Straight Shutout, 6-0

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Call Marvin Miller. The American League's hitters are back on strike—put there every time Wilbur Wood and his knuckleball go to work for the Chicago White Sox.

Wood has pitched 36 innings this season and allowed exactly one run. Only a two-out homer by Kansas City's Bob Oliver in the bottom of the ninth inning of his first start mars Wood's pitching record so far.

The rubber-armed right-hander hurled his third consecutive shutout Tuesday night, baffling Cleveland 6-0 as the White Sox won their sixth straight game.

In other American League action Tuesday, Oakland edged New York 4-3 in 12 innings. Minnesota blasted Boston 12-0. Kansas City trimmed Baltimore 3-0. California downed Milwaukee 4-1 and Detroit took Texas 4-1.

The White Sox have played nine games this season and Wood has started four of them. He works with two days rest because the knuckler puts virtually no strain at all on his pitching arm.

The AL hitters haven't been putting much of a strain on Wood either. The Indians managed seven hits against the knuckler but three double plays kept Wood out of serious trouble.

Chicago, which dropped its first three games of the season before Wood straightened things out, struck for three runs in the sixth inning, snapping a scoreless duel between the knuckleballer and young Milt Wilcox.

That was plenty for Wood, who got only one run in each of his first two starts this season.

Pitching dominated elsewhere in the AL too.

California's Clyde Wright, Jim Perry of Minnesota and Detroit's Mickey Lolich all had four-hitters.

Wright drove in two runs in the seventh inning with a clutch double as the Angels snapped a 1-1 tie by scoring three times.

Lolich survived a shaky first inning to subdue Texas, ending the Rangers' four-game winning streak. Tony Taylor tripled home two runs for the Tigers.

Perry coasted past Boston as Steve Braut and Steve Brye combined to drive in seven runs for the Twins.

Minnesota piled up nine runs in the first two innings, making it easy for Perry.

It wasn't so easy for Oakland against the Yankees. The A's battled back from a 3-0 deficit, tying the score on a homer by Gene Tenace and a two-run triple by Sal Bando.

Sweet Springs' Harlan Reid pitched a one-hitter, leading the Greyhounds to a 9-0 win over Leetton.

In the day's second contest, Bill Privitt held Stover to three hits, in hurling New Franklin into the second round of play. 7-0.

Sweet Springs got only four hits, but cashed in on eight Bulldog errors in tallying their nine runs.

Likewise, New Franklin took advantage of eight Stover errors, five by third baseman Eric Robinson, to chalk up their opening-round win.

Bob Campbell was the losing pitcher for Leetton; Paul Marrott was charged with the Stover loss.

Action was scheduled to continue in the playoffs Wednesday afternoon. Cole Camp and Slater, a first-round winner over Smithton, met at 1 p.m.

Thursday's games find Sweet Springs taking on Lincoln, who had a first-round bye, at 1 p.m.; at 3:30 p.m., New Franklin and LaMonte tangle.

Boxing Press Conference

Welcome to an Ali Show

By RALPH NOVAK

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Muhammad Ali walks quietly into the small, dim hotel meeting room wearing a conservative dark blue suit. Most of the assembled reporters and photographers don't even look up from their free press conference sandwiches and coffee as he and George Chuvalo warmly greet each other.

They don't pay any attention to him as he sits down to look through the sport section of a morning paper. Or as he stands up to greet and spar playfully, as he would an old friend, with a writer he doesn't really seem to recognize.

Everybody is, after all, waiting for Ali to go into his flamboyant, bombastic Cassius Clay act.

"Wait until Ali starts talking before you start to shoot," writer-turned-telecaster Dick Schaap tells his cameraman as the TV lights flash on and everybody starts milling into place. "He'll put on a good show. I don't have to worry about him."

The conference is being held to promote Ali's May 1 bout with Chuvalo in Vancouver, the next episode in his strident campaign to make sure he stays busy — and prosperous (he has a $200,000 guarantee) — while he waits for a rematch with Joe Frazier.

This is going to be another case of Ali battling a foregone conclusion — he beat the 34-year-old Chuvalo in a 1966 decision and Chuvalo has lost 16 times in 86 pro fights while Ali has been beaten only by Frazier.

But ringside seats are going for $100 apiece and there will be theater television of the bout in the United States. So the fight must be sold.

Ali and Chuvalo and their trainers are sitting at a long table, separated by promoter Murray Pezim, who opens the press conference by going over the wheres and whens of the fight.

Ali sits listening with his head down, occasionally pounding the table with his right fist, looking like a bull pawing the ground. As Pezim continues, the pounding becomes more frequent and finally, when Pezim says how proud everyone in Canada is of the fact that Chuvalo, a Canadian, has never been knocked down, the explosion comes.

"He WILL fall," Ali interrupts, with a punctuating pound.

And cameras begin to whirr, tape recorders click on, reporters, laughing in anticipation, start to scribble in their notebooks.

"He WILL fall," Ali repeats, wound up now. "Sugar Ray Robinson fell. Joe Louis fell. Gene Tunney fell. Joe Frazier fell. And they even took pictures of the bottom of my shoes. And I tell you now that he will fall."

Chuvalo starts to respond and points at Ali.

Half-rising, Ali says sternly, "Don't be pointing at me. Black folks don't like white folks pointing at 'em like that. How can I walk through Harlem if I let you point at me like that?"

Chuvalo, earnest and plodding, the perfect straight man, starts to talk about his previous fight with Ali, arguing that he lost that time because he didn't have enough time to get in shape.

"You are a dirty fighter," Ali interrupts. "You hit me low 26 times in that fight and that Canadian referee let you get away with it. You try that one time again and it will be all low blows. I won't let you get away with that. Ain't going to be no 40 or 50 low blows like there was last time."

The reporters and photographers are all laughing now, getting what they came for, the performance that is a curious cross between Stepin Fetchit and Malcolm X. Chuvalo is, in spite of himself, sweating from the exertion his role demands.

Pezim is smiling cherubically, content with what is happening. And Ali, unrruffled, unsweating, lets the faintest of amused smiles touch the corners of his mouth as he glares at Chuvalo again and says, "Joe Frazier stands off to one side now, relaxed again, signing autographs for the hotel workers who get up enough nerve to approach him.

Somebody asks Ali if he doesn't get tired of press conferences like this. "In a year-and-a-half or so I'll be all through with this and just go off and study my religion," he says.

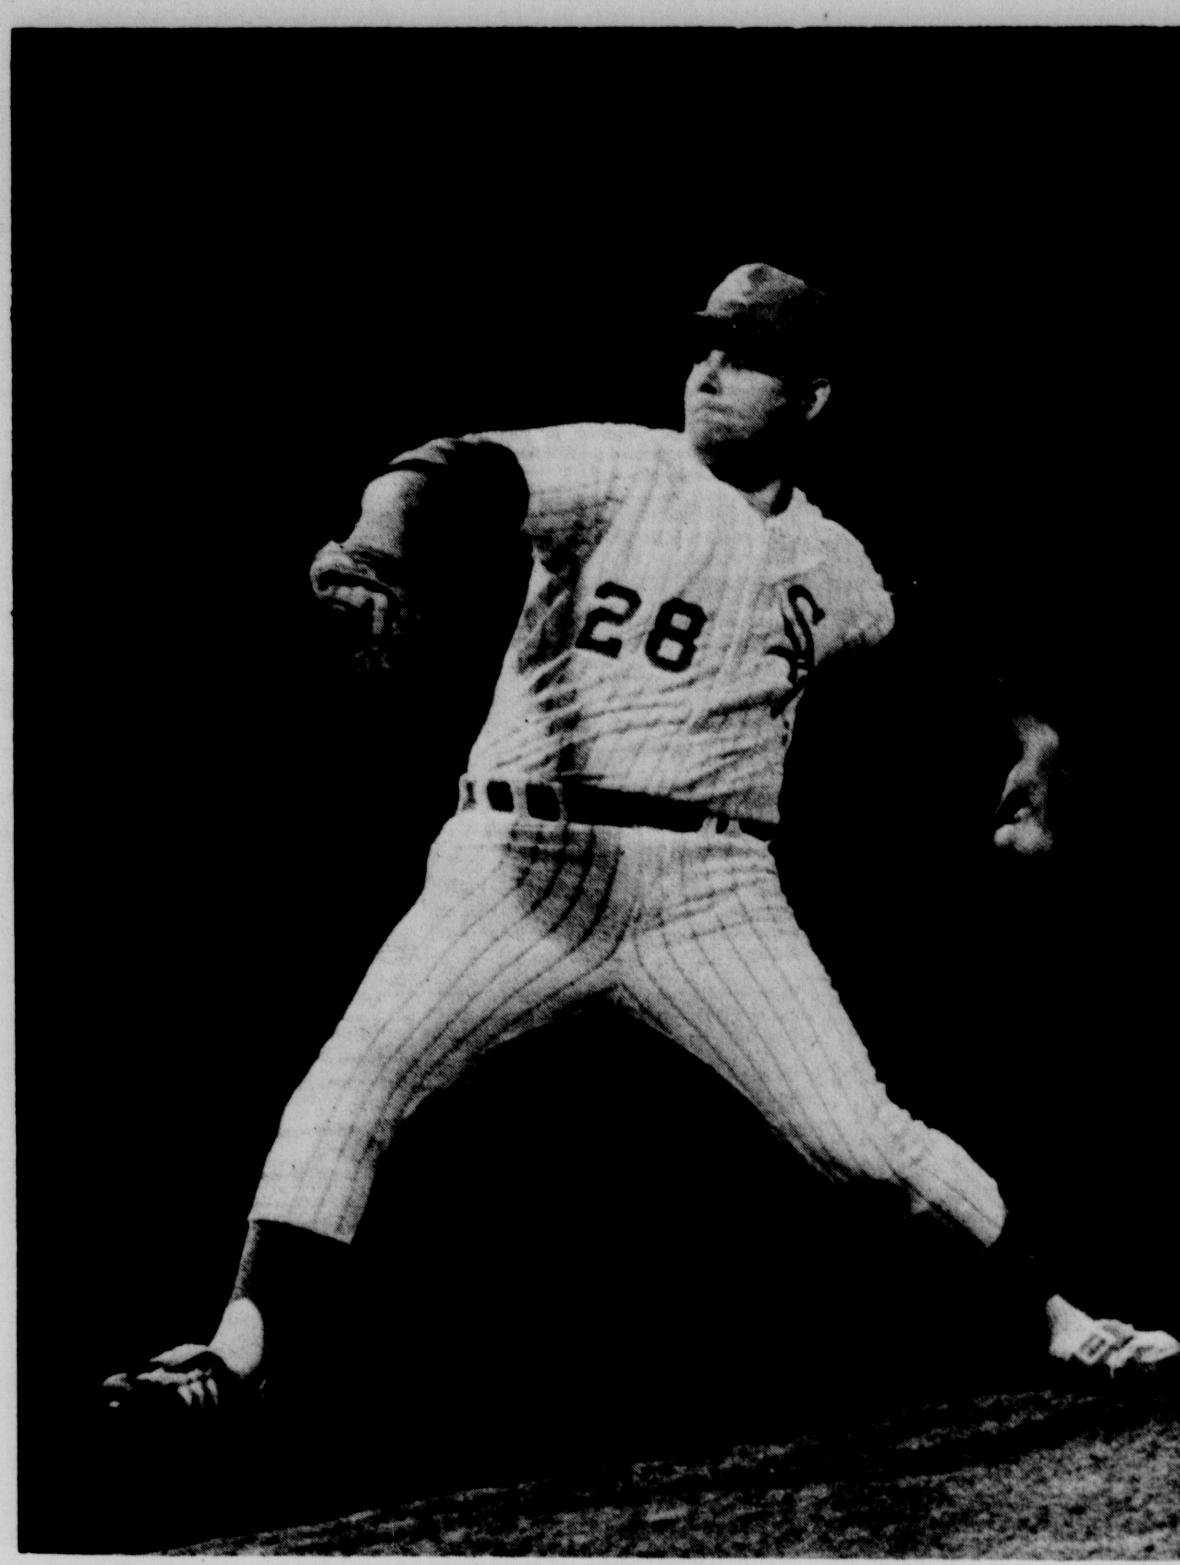

"But in the meantime boxing is a business that you have to promote just like any other business. And I'm the one who promotes it better than anyone else."

Take That ... and That!

NBA Title Series Opens

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers feel they have to neutralize Dave DeBusschere. The New York Knicks face the task of stopping Wilt Chamberlain.

The two teams meet tonight in the first game of the best-of-seven series to determine the National Basketball Association champion. The nationally televised game, with Los Angeles blacked out, was scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. (PST) at the Forum.

DeBusschere is their best man as far as rebounding and shooting outside are concerned," said K.C. Jones, Lakers' assistant coach, of the 6-foot-6 Knick cornerman. "He must be stopped."

Six-foot-7 Laker forward Happy Hairston is matched against DeBusschere, and the Knicks' 6-8 Jerry Lucas at center goes against the 7-1 Chamberlain.

Milwaukee's Kareem Abdul Jabbar, at least an inch taller and a decade younger, couldn't outmuscle an inspired 35-year-old Chamberlain last week.

"There was just no way that series was going to go more than six games," said Fred Schaus, the Lakers' general manager. "I've never seen Wilt quite like that. He grimaced at every call."

The Lakers, who have won $124,500 with playoff victories over Chicago, 4-0, and Milwaukee, 4-2, and with the best won-lost percentage in the regular season, could set an NBA record for $224,500 if they beat the Knicks. New York, with $94,500 in winnings for beating Baltimore, 4-2, and Boston 4-1, could add $65,000 by beating the Lakers.

Losers in playoff finals seven times in the past 10 seasons, the Lakers haven't won a title since moving to Los Angeles in 1960. Their latest shot, in 1970, was frustrated by the Knicks in seven games.

Compromise On Welfare In Progress

Driver, Newsmen Captured

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — An assistant secretary of Health, Education and Welfare said last night that the administration is working with Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., on a compromise to President Nixon's welfare reform package.

John Montgomery told a University of Kansas audience that HEW is working with the liberal Democratic senator in order to counter an alternative proposal by Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell Long, D-La. Montgomery said Ribicoff is knowledgeable as to what's wrong with the present welfare system and he is in agreement with the administration on major reform principles.

"I would have to say our relationship with him is one of an ally," said Montg. "He remains to be seen some remaining differences between Sen. Ribicoff and the administration can be resolved. But we're optimistic that a middle-ground compromise can be achieved."

Under Sen. Long's leadership, the Senate Finance Committee will probably recommend "legislation not responsive to the principles of reform," Montg. said.

He bases his comment on public statements by Sen. Long and other information he has received. Montgomery says the committee will probably kill minimum income for families, wage supplementation to the working poor, and nationally uniform eligibility requirements for families.

Montgomery added that he expects one-third of the finance committee to support any Ribicoff-administration compromise on the Senate floor. He said it would not be worthwhile to try to change the minds of the majority of the committee.

Montgomery said he hopes the Senate will vote on all the welfare reform legislation by July.

Patriots Lose, Gain

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots lost one National Football League veteran and gained another Tuesday in roster changes.

General Manager Upton Bell said that punter-safety Tom Janik, a nine-year pro, is retiring. Bell also announced the signing of defensive tackle Dick Arndt as a free agent.

Salant Scheduled As Dinner Speaker

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Richard S. Salant, the president of CBS News, is scheduled to speak here May 1, at the third annual Journalism Foundation dinner.

Salant's talk on "The Presidency and the Press" is set for 7 p.m. at the Sheraton-Jefferson Hotel. Tickets are $10 each.

Salant has been president of CBS News since 1966. Last year he was involved in a dispute with Vice President Spiro Agnew, when Agnew attacked two CBS documentaries, "The Selling of the Pentagon" and "The Hunger of America."

Request Airport Meeting

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A meeting with Federal Aviation Administration head John H. Shaffer has been requested by a group working for location of a proposed second commercial airport on the Missouri side of metropolitan St. Louis.

Henry J. Elmendorf, chairman of the Missouri-St. Louis Metropolitan Airport Authority, said Tuesday the group has asked Shaffer to meet with them here May 1.

The Authority "Wishes to emphasize its sincere desire to deal with all aspects of an airport site, including balancing of needs, services and facilities," Shaffer was told.

The Missouri group wants the airport in St. Charles County, about 20 miles northwest of St. Louis.

Initial reports said the three were led away an hour later. Cambodian soldiers reopened the road, and the newsmen's car was found parked beside the highway.

Nineteen newsmen are now missing in Cambodia.

Reynolds, 30, has been in Vietnam several years and has worked as a freelance and as a staff reporter for the Overseas Weekly, a private newspaper for American servicemen. He has a wife and child in Saigon.

UPI said the two newsmen left Phnom Penh early this morning, apparently to drive to Neak Luong for a look at the military situation.

A south Vietnamese forward base is located on the eastern bank of the Mekong there, and to the east, toward the Vietnam frontier. Communist troops have seized control of a 50-mile stretch of the highway.

Mind Your Money

Winemakers' Aid Is Available

By PETER WEAVER

Q—Would you please tell me where to get information on winemaking? Is there an organization I can join?—J.F.S. Mukwonago, Wis.

A—Yes, there's a good one. For information, write: The American Wine Society, 235 Berkshire Rd., Ithaca, N.Y. 14850. The society provides newsletters and bulletins throughout the year to keep members up to date on the latest winemaking equipment and production methods. Membership is $10 a year.

Some stores are now selling a home winemaking kit for around $8. Winery technicians claim this kit can produce around a gallon of passable wine. Actually, you can get the equipment you need for less money. You can get special juice concentrates from commercial wine suppliers. If you don't have a supplier nearby, the Wine Society can give you addresses of reputable companies that sell by mail.

The Internal Revenue Service allows a family to produce 200 gallons of wine each year for its own use — tax free. You still have to get a permit from the nearest IRS office (phone book under U.S. Government). It's free.

Q—I recently mailed an electric coffeemaker back for repairs. That was nearly two months ago and I've received no notice that it was received. Can you give some advice on what's the best way to get things of value mailed safely? — Mrs. C. W. Sarrier, Pa.

A—In your case, you should have sent the coffeemaker parcel post, insured. The minimum insurance is $15 and it costs 20 cents. You can get parcels insured up to $200 (costs 60 cents). The insurance fee goes on top of your regular postage.

For things of considerably higher value, such as a diamond ring or bonds, you should use registered mail. By registering the mail, your package gets special post office protection (it must be signed for by everyone who handles it) and insurance up to $10,000. For items up to $100 in value, you pay 95 cents on top of the regular postage. You pay $2.75 for items up to $2,000.

The catch is you must have good proof of value in order to collect. A sales receipt or a professional appraisal usually serves as proof of value.

You can send such things as an important bill of lading or a complaint by certified mail to give proof of mailing and receipt. There's no insurance with this. It costs 30 cents plus postage. You can "restrict" delivery to a specific individual. This costs 50 cents extra.

Q—I own 100 acres of wooded land and would like to sell some timber. Where can I get information on how to go about this?—S.I., Shrewsbury, Mass.

A—Call your county agriculture extension service to find out where the nearest state forest office can be found. You can get a forester to take a look at your land to see what kind of trees you have. You can get advice on marketing, the best time to cut and replanting.

Some trees are very valuable. A family in West Virginia recently found they owned land with several "tulip trees" on it. This kind of wood is extremely valuable in making furniture veneers.

Q—In warning consumers against mail-order schemes, you said: "Don't ever buy land you have not personally seen and have not checked out with a lawyer." This is good advice but checking with a lawyer is not enough.

You should also consult a realtor, a professional in real estate, who is a member of the National Assn. of Real Estate Boards. — J.K., Evinger Associates, San Clemente, Calif.

A—Thanks for the reminder.

Both professionals, realtor and lawyer, are necessary in buying property, especially the kind that's some distance from your home.

Desert Men Might Dwindle Through Beckonings of Outside World

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

BURAIMI OASIS, Union of Arab Emirates (AP) — How you gonna keep 'em down in the desert after they've seen the farm?

In oil-rich Abu Dhabi, the Persian Gulf sheikdom with the highest per capita income in the world, this question begs the answer of whether the old Bedouin way of life can long survive.

Suhale Mohammed Altager is a case in point. Eighteen months ago, at the invitation of the government, Suhale forsook his wandering ways in the waterless wastes of the desert and took up farming. It was farming Abu Dhabi style.

The government gave him the land, the seeds, the fertilizers, the irrigation equipment, the insecticides, loaned him the farm machinery and sent out agricultural experts to teach him how to grow strawberries, tomatoes, pomegranates and lemons. Since the true Bedouin regards physical labor as degrading and not to be indulged in by free men, the government sent Omanis and Baluchi laborers to work the farm.

For watching other people work, Suhale received a government grant of 60 dinars a month, or about $30. The farm was a huge success, earning Suhale seldom less than $400 a month, despite a markup of six times what he was paid by the time his produce reached the consumer.

Then Suhale cut the tie that bound him to his brothers in the desert. He sold his 50 camels and bought a bright red Mercedes-Benz sedan.

"Always had to feed camels whether they worked or not," said Suhale turning down the hi-fi cassette player in his limousine so the interpreter could hear. "Mercedes only takes petrol when it goes somewhere. Camels had to be looked after

Reserve To Burn

Das Island, in the Persian Gulf about 60 miles from Abu Dhabi city, lies under a pall of smoke from superfluous gas being burned off behind the oil tanks in the foreground. The island is the collection and processing center for Abu Dhabi's booming oil production industry — which now makes it the world's 12th largest oil exporting country.

day and night. Mercedes sleeps until wakened."

Suhale's irrigation farm, one of 600 sponsored by the government, has a comfortable, electrified new farmhouse with a television aerial on the roof and a swimming pool in the back yard. But he spends little time there. He prefers to live among his friends in an old mud hut shaded by date palms in a tiny patch of oasis belonging to his aging father, a camel merchant in a neighboring village. "My people," he explained, with pride.

At night the taxi drivers from Abu Dhabi town, also learning a new way of life in the glow of the oil fields, come out and park their taxis among the camels and talk about the old nomadic days when a man's home was a goatskin tent and his address was written on the wind.

"The Bedouin way of life is doomed, nothing can save it," sighed Col. Hugh Boustead, a retired British army officer who once commanded the camel corps in the Sudan and now looks after the sheik of Abu Dhabi's stable of thoroughbred Arabian steeds.

Before oil was discovered in 1959, Abu Dhabi was the most desolate corner of the Arabian peninsula. It had no cattle, no port, no fresh water, no skills, no crafts, no known minerals. Reefs and sandbars kept ships three miles off its barren coast. Its few palm trees grew dates fit only for camel fodder, and even its sand was deemed too salty for the humblest construction project.

Miserly, cantankerous old Sheik Shakbut, who lived without benefit of electricity in the top turret of an old mud fort, was suspicious of what the sudden oil wealth would do for Abu Dhabi and its Bedouin tribesmen.

More than anything, he feared that the old Bedouin ways would be quickly submerged in the swift social reforms taking place in Kuwait, Bahrain and other neighboring oil kingdoms. Desert tribesmen baptized in camel urine and swathed in camel dung from infancy, he reasoned, had no need for modern medical science to protect them from the realities of a harsh life. Even when the oil companies wanted to up the ante, at the urging of Iran and Saudi Arabia, Sheik Shakbut stuck to his solitary ways and refused to renegotiate. Worldly goods were a burden on the camel's back in a world of wind, sand and stars.

With more than a push from the oil companies and the British foreign office, Sheik Shakbut was peacefully deposed by his brother, Sheikh Zayed, in 1966. By Abu Dhabi standards of history, nothing became his reign like his leaving it. He was the only ruler in the last five to vacate the throne without benefit of fratricide.

Today, Abu Dhabi is an oil-grown Disneyland of high-rise hotels, divided highways, glass-walled banks and free public housing. Its population has doubled to 70,000 with immigrants arriving from all over the Arab world to perform the oil field work deemed too undignified for Bedouins. Computers plan its future in cement, aluminum and chemicals against the day when the oil stops flowing.

Bedouins are paid a bonus to send their children to school. Land Rovers are sent into the desert to fetch them. Those who make good are sent off, free, to universities around the world, and already 45 of the first batch of graduates are enrolled in a special "course for ambassadors." Successful graduates will represent the recently formed Union of Arab Emirates at the United Nations and new embassies around the world.

'Freebies' Provide Touchy Political Subject in Washington

By H. L. SCHWARTZ III
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Commerce Peter G. Peterson recently accepted a free ride to Chicago aboard a jet owned by Standard Oil of Indiana.

But an aide said it was the only time since taking office in February that the secretary has ridden on a corporate plane.

Undersecretary of Interior William T. Pecora is another high administration official who recently took a free ride on a company jet, traveling to South Dakota and back courtesy of Northern Natural Gas of Omaha, Neb.

But Pecora, too, insisted it was the only time he has ever accepted such a favor.

The question of corporations making their private airplanes available for government officials was raised last month by lobbyist Ditta Beard of International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. Mrs. Beard, a key figure in the Senate's investigation of ITT's relations with the Republican administration, said some members of Congress made liberal use of the company's jet fleet.

Singled out by name was Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind. The senator, said Mrs. Beard, considered ITT "a sort of personal taxi cab company."

To find out how much use is made of company jets by officials, the Associated Press staked out the general-aviation terminal at Washington's National Airport for five days.

In addition to Peterson and Pecora, six senators and two members of the House were seen departing or returning to Washington aboard corporation-owned jets.

They were Sens. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga.; Milton Young, R-N.D.; Lawton Chiles, D-Fla.; William Spong, D-Va.; Harry F. Byrd, a Virginia independent, and Peter Dominick, R-Colo., and Reps. Dan Daniels, D-Va., and Rep. John S. Monagan, D-Conn.

An investigation of the individuals and companies involved did not turn up any evidence of outright conflict of interest, although in almost every case there were strong common ties.

Most of those spotted at the airport indicated they saw nothing wrong with accepting the favors, but some did, including Pecora and the lobbyist who ferried the undersecretary and Sen. Young halfway across the continent and back.

Asked if his company made a practice of offering transportation to members of Congress and government officials, Lynn Mote, head of government relations for Northern Gas, replied:

"No. No. Because of the implication put on it. We don't do it as a general rule because it is easily misunderstood."

This wariness apparently is shared by the pilot of Southern Railway's twin-prop Grumman Gulfstream. "When are you going to leave my passengers alone?" asked the pilot, a short, stocky and very angry man who declined to give his name.

No official was aboard Southern's plane when that comment was made last Friday, but one week before, the plane took Sen. and Mrs. Talmadge home to Georgia.

Riding along with Talmadge, who is chairman of the Agriculture Committee, was John Duncan, head of Southern's agriculture services.

"If I could be bought with a free plane ride," said Talmadge, "I don't belong in the Senate."

Lobbyist Mote said Northern is interested in the project because it will generate 1,000 jobs and the company hopes new residents will buy natural gas.

Pecora said he didn't know the plane belonged to Northern until just before he boarded it. He added that lobbyist Mote never raised any questions dealing with the policy of Inter-irp, which has responsibility for public dinner.

Philip Drotning, director of urban affairs for Standard Oil, said in an interview he had been in the Commerce Department's Office of Minority Business Enterprises that afternoon and had mentioned the company plane was going back to Chicago. "It seemed silly for them to fly commercial when we were both going to the same place," he said.

As secretary of commerce, Peterson is the administration's leading envoy to the business world.

Interior Undersecretary Pecora said his flight on the Northern Natural Gas plane April 13 was arranged by the office of Sen. Young.

The undersecretary was the principal speaker at a dinner that night in Sioux Falls, S.D., marking the start of construction on a $10-million federal installation to store weather and other information from satellites.

Chiles, in an interview, said the plane ride home (the plane was headed for Miami but dropped him off at Lakeland) was offered by "the president of one of their corporations" at a meeting in his office. He said he couldn't remember the man's name.

Chiles said he often rode on corporate planes. Asked which companies, he said he could only recall the Jim Walter Corp., another Florida conglomerate dealing in shell homes, steel, piping and other products.

Sen. Spong and Harry Byrd and Rep. Daniels rode a twin-prop plane to Charlottesville, Va., for the funeral of former Gov. John S. Battle.

An aide to Spong said the plane was sent to Washington by a Claude Jessup. Newspaper files in Charlottesville show Jessup is chairman of the board of Continental Trailways, an officer or director of numerous other enterprises, and chairman of Alderman 250 Corp., a real estate development company. The files also show that Jessup has been a fund raiser for both Spong and Byrd.

Through an aide, Spong said he may have traveled once or twice in a Jessup plane, but does not make a practice of using corporate aircraft.

Bryd, also through an aide, said he had no recollection of ever flying before on a plane furnished by Jessup. "The senator certainly doesn't deny he has flown before in corporate planes and doesn't have any policy against it," said the aide.

Sen. Dominick boarded a De-Haviland registered to Manufacturer's Leasing Corp., which is located in the Koppers Corp. building in Pittsburgh, Pa.

A Koppers spokesman said the plane usually is leased to his firm. The company helped organize a dinner at which Dominick was invited to speak and sent the plane "as a courtesy" to provide roundtrip transportation for the Senator.

Dominick, a member of the Labor Committee, spoke on labor legislation to the Pittsburgh Personnel Association. He collected a $500 fee.

Sen. Talmadge flew home in the Southern Railway plane which, an aide said, was headed for Florida but made a stop in Georgia for the senator and his wife.

A Talmadge aide said Southern Railway and other Georgia based companies often call the senator's office on Friday afternoon to say the plane is heading south with seats available.

The aide specifically mentioned Lockheed Aircraft Corp., which last year got $250 million in federal loan guarantees to a California subsidiary. Talmadge cosponsored that legislation.

Shortly before Talmadge departed aboard Southern's plane, Rep. John S. Monagan, a Democrat, flew home to Connecticut on a jet owned by Uniroyal.

"I want to say this was no joy ride," Monagan said. "I've never before ridden on that plane. I've only been in that airport once in my life."

"We had matters to discuss. We discussed improving the position of this company. It's one of the largest employers in my district. We have 9 per cent unemployment in my state and Uniroyal has had to lay off about 200 people."

Chile's Arenas Striking

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON.
Associated Press Writer

PUNTA ARENAS, Chile (AP) — Move over Chicago, Punta Arenas is windier than the Windy City.

During the winter months in this port at the southern end of South America, the winds reach gusts of 50 to 60 miles an hour.

You can really tell it's winter when the pedestrians are walking horizontally.

Set on a hill looking out towards misty Tierra Del Fuego, Punta Arenas, a city of 70,000, resembles a New England seacoast community. Business offices and banks are sturdily built of brick and concrete. Most of the houses are constructed of wood and are insulated against the cold, a contrast to the mostly-cement and stucco dwellings in the rest of Chile, where the climate resembles that of California.

Punta Arenas—which means sandy point in Spanish although the beaches are of rocks and pebbles—grew up as a booming seaport. It was the principal fueling and supply stop for ships going around Cape Horn.

But the opening of the Panama Canal in the early part of this century almost spelled catastrophe for the city. However, substantial sheep farms on Tierra Del Fuego needed a port to export wool and mutton and kept things going until the Chilean government also found oil there.

Now, the State Petroleum Agency maintains offices and support facilities in Punta Arenas for the oil fields.

In addition to petroleum tankers and freighters, Punta Arenas also is headquarters for the Chilean Navy's southern district. And ships supplying the bases of various nations conducting research in the Antarctic regularly stop here.

Now, the State Petroleum Agency maintains offices and support facilities in Punta Arenas for the oil fields.

In addition to petroleum tankers and freighters, Punta Arenas also is headquarters for the Chilean Navy's southern district. And ships supplying the bases of various nations conducting research in the Antarctic regularly stop here.

Most of the houses are constructed of wood and are insulated against the cold, a contrast to the mostly-cement and stucco dwellings in the rest of Chile, where the climate resembles that of California.

Punta Arenas—which means sandy point in Spanish although the beaches are of rocks and pebbles—grew up as a booming seaport. It was the principal fueling and supply stop for ships going around Cape Horn.

But the opening of the Panama Canal in the early part of this century almost spelled catastrophe for the city. However, substantial sheep farms on Tierra Del Fuego needed a port to export wool and mutton and kept things going until the Chilean government also found oil there.

Designer Cookware is fashioned to catch your fancy. Made of sturdy steel covered inside and out with a tough enamel surface that comes in pineapple or avocado. Both colors sport a merry spray of flowers to keep your kitchen bright and beautiful. Enamel over steel construction spreads heat evenly, so foods cook gently on economical low heat. Chip-resistant rims and welded handles add extra flair to oven-to-table dishes. And you can forget scouring! Just soap and water in your sink or dishwasher keeps this cookware shining.

Still at Standoff On College Board

The wish, expressed on this page two weeks ago, that the State Fair Community College board of trustees patch up its disputes and move on in a spirit of unity, appears to be a forlorn one.

Monday night the board held a second meeting to elect officers, called after the election was thrown into deadlock April 10. But again the board split along county lines in a 3 to 3 standoff.

Legally, under state law, the board apparently can continue with its present officers until new ones are elected. But practically speaking the arrangement leaves much to be desired.

Obstructionism, rather than cooperation, already is evident on the board. And the district can ill afford this state of affairs, what with such vital questions as land acquisition, new construction and academic accreditation demanding action.

A new factor vitally affecting the board's future was revealed Monday night, when its attorney announced that a suit was expected from the American Civil Liberties Union, challenging the legality of the present board because it violates the one-man, one-vote dictum of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Based on recent court precedent, it is a foregone conclusion that such a suit could easily be won, forcing the junior college district into new elections based on population. Either sub-districts of equal population would have to be drawn, or all trustees elected at large.

With Pettis County's population advantage over Benton County of roughly 4 to 1, it is clear what such an arrangement could do to the latter's representation. It could easily shrink from the present three seats on the board to only one.

In the past the system of electing trustees, although not in conformity with court rulings, has proved workable because a feeling of unity and cooperation prevailed on the board, despite individual differences.

But unless things improve, such a change might prove to be the only way out of the present deadlock.

Valuable Wood

Very hard and having a close grain, wood of the holly tree is valuable for musical instruments, furniture and interior decoration. The inner bark yields the sticky material called birdlime.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The first U.S. Olympic competition winner was James Connolly who won the triple jump contest at the Olympiad in Athens, Greece, on April 6, 1896. The World Almanac recalls. His 45-foot mark was 3 1/4 feet more than his nearest competitor. The 10-man American team won 9 of the 12 track events.

Dispute Threatens Future of the USIA

WASHINGTON — Foot-in-mouth disease generally is not a fatal ailment, but it could be for my old government outpost. The U.S. Information Agency.

For the second time in its 19-year life, USIA is about to have its budget slashed and its programs gutted because of indiscretions by its top officers.

Rowan
A Senate committee headed by Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) wants to slash $45 million off USIA's request of $200 million for fiscal 1973. If this cut is sustained by Congress, USIA will be about 25 percent worse off in budget power than at any time in its history.

The ostensible reason for USIA's budget woes is that it has pulled another of those Peter Flanigan-type "executive privilege" ploys. The Foreign Relations Committee, which for the first time in history got authority to "authorize" money for USIA before the Appropriations Committee acts, wants USIA's classified "country plans," or documents stating what USIA proposes to achieve in each country. USIA got President Nixon to invoke executive privilege and refuse to turn over the documents.

But that's only part of the problem.

It surely is no coincidence that Fulbright recently was assailed as "very naive and stupid" by USIA's motion picture director Bruce Herschensohn. Although Herschensohn resigned and USIA Director Frank Shakespeare apologized to Fulbright, the damage seems to be lasting.

This is a pathetic case of history repeating itself in a way in which the national interest is damaged by sensitive senators who ought not let their personal pride or sense of power push them into vindictive actions.

In 1957, with the ordeal of "McCarthyism" a bitter hangover and Democrats recoiling from charges that theirs was "the party of treason," USIA Director Arthur Larson said in a speech in Hawaii:

"Throughout the New and Fair Deals, this country was in the grip of a somewhat alien philosophy, imported from Europe."

A tough, powerful, easily-offended gent named Lyndon Baines Johnson presided over the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that set USIA's budget in those days. Angry over Larson's political slur (Franklin Delano Roosevelt was Johnson's idol), he cut USIA's 1958 budget request of $140 million to $89 million, or $24 million less than the agency had received for 1957.

Intensive battling by House members got Johnson to come up to $95.1 million, but that was still a bitterly destructive cut—brought on by a needlessly dumb political gambit.

It took seven years for USIA to get back to the budget level from which Johnson had whacked it.

The current Fulbright assault reflects criticisms of USIA that go deeper than Herschensohn's impolitic remarks. Some senators and a lot of State Department people, from the top down, have been complaining that USIA is too political, too inclined to pursue its own foreign policy, which is generally more right-wingish and cold-warish than President Nixon's policies.

Some State Department officers and even a few USIA career officers have campaigned privately to undercut Shakespeare and deprive him of support from Congressional liberals who generally have given the agency strong backing.

Fulbright has been miffed at USIA for a long time. For years he has held the notion that cultural programs ought to be separated from USIA so they don't get contaminated by hard propaganda. Some members of the Foreign Relations Committee support the argument that USIA ought to be just a wing of the State Department instead of an independent agency.

When Herschensohn appeared on a television program with New York's Conservative Sen. James Buckley and insulted Fulbright, and when Acting Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst ignored myriad precedents to give Buckley a go-ahead to use USIA films domestically, the agency was frayed deeper into politics than that agency ought ever be.

But there simply has to be a saner, fairer way of dealing with Larson-Herschensohn-type indiscretions than this mangling of programs vital to the national interest.

Who knows better than Fulbright the futility of trying to maintain the U.S. position in the world through military might? Who should know better than Fulbright that it is in the areas of ideas, ideals, ideology that we must make a claim to whatever leadership we aspire to?

Fulbright may feel helpless to curb expenditures for massive U.S. military intervention in Vietnam. "Executive privilege" may gall him. But this is no time to let his frustrations drive him to cut USIA to the heart.

We can hope that on reflection Fulbright will see this and that, twice burned, everyone associated with USIA will face the fact that partisan politicking is the greatest single threat to the agency's survival.

Thailand: The Next Target?

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON (NEA) — There are no headlines, no tanks and no pitched battles between masses of troops, but in a number of ways the situation in Thailand is even more dangerous than in South Vietnam.

Here is progressing steadily the slow, unglamorous political build-up of the underground that is the essential basis for successful insurgencies.

The terrorism is precisely directed at killing key men—police, government officials and selected teachers, farm group leaders and merchants—in sufficient numbers to enable the underground to organize with the minimum amount of interference.

The Communist underground essentially is following the oil spot theory so popular with American planners in South Vietnam for several years. An area is built up with a competent underground to a level where, for all practical purposes, the Communist shadow government is the de facto political power in the area—through organization, intimidation and outright terrorism.

Then organizers are sent to nearby territories to expand the base.

The Communists have been mining the Northeast, the far North-Northwest and the Southwest for years. Though the government is still normally in control in most of these areas, the Communist power is not to be denied. Enough progress has been made so that organizers are moving southward from the North and Northwest and northward from the Southwest.

Small cells now dot the central heartland of Thailand. They are not yet powerful. But they are building. It will probably take another five to eight years for these central Thailand pockets to grow to serious proportions.

A sound, countrywide Communist organization takes 15 to 20 years to develop. The Thai organization is perhaps 10 years old by this calendar. There were Communist groups in Thailand many years before this "starting point," of course. But the organized expansion began about 1962.

The work before that was scattered and fragmentary, based primarily on the community of North Vietnamese which had fled Indochina in the fighting against the French.

What we have then in Thailand essentially is the highly-skilled and persistent political organizing and recruiting which is the basis for any effective underground take-over. But with a special twist. These precinct workers are backed by armed terrorists who assassinate or terrify key members of the opposition and any hardy independent souls who stand in their way.

But the basis is organization, however accomplished, and not military strength. The object is to get every citizen into at least four Communist-front organizations or clubs, say a women's group, or a men's association, a farm group, a youth group, a teachers group, a small merchants group or whatever else is suitable.

The situation in Thailand is all the more serious because the government, however well intentioned, has once again eliminated the elected officials and elected legislative bodies and set aside the basic democratic features of the constitution which was adopted such a short time back.

The Thai developments do not call for troops or air power. Instead they call for a full play of democracy which will pit freely-elected political officials and self-governing villages against Communist-style organizing by stealth, terrorism and force.

Merry-Go-Round

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Government strategists in 1969 delivered a unanimous warning to incoming President Nixon that South Vietnam's armed forces would be no match for North Vietnamese-Viet Cong forces "in the foreseeable future," that the pacification program showed no promise of "complete success" for "several years," and that the Saigon government might not "survive a peaceful competition with the (Communists) for political power in South Vietnam."

This gloomy outlook, contained in a secret, two-inch-thick review known as National Security Study Memorandum 1, has changed only in degree during the past three years.

The President's response has been to do his best to bolster Saigon while extricating the United States from the tragic Vietnam war. He has been determined, however, to end the American involvement with dignity. In his private conversations, he has repeated that he won't let the United States be "pushed around," "degraded" or "humiliated."

This was the reason he struck back with such fury from the air after the North Vietnamese assault across the demilitarized zone.

The secret 1969 study, known simply as NSSM-1 inside the White House, was compiled by foreign policy czar Henry Kissinger. He sent eight pages of pointed, penetrating questions to all the government agencies involved in the war effort.

Their answers showed considerable confusion over what was happening in Vietnam. The U.S. high command found that Saigon controlled "three-fourths of the population." The Joint Chiefs expected this to rise to 90 per cent by the end of 1969. Their figures were disputed, however, by the defense secretary's office, which suggested "at least 50 per cent of the total rural population is subject to significant VC pressure and influence."

Intelligence experts for the CIA and State Department concurred, with the latter estimating "that the VC have a significant effect on at least two-thirds of the rural population."

South Vietnamese politics, according to the study, were plagued with "pragmatism, expediency, war weariness, a desire to remain unaligned and end up on the winning side," compounded by "family loyalty, corruption, social immobility and clandestine activities."

No U.S. agency would forecast a "victory" over the Communists, but the military still stressed "the need for continued US support." The defense secretary and State Department believed that "only a compromise settlement is possible."

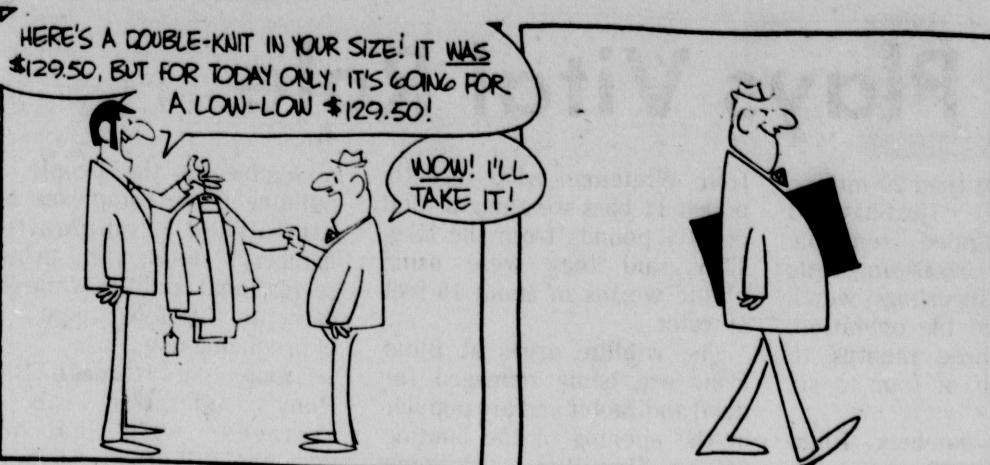

The CIA, for its part, suggested that "progress in SVN has been sufficiently slow and fragile that substantial US disengagement in the next few years could jeopardize all recent gains."

There were general agreement that "the enemy has been able during the last four years to double his combat forces, double the level of infiltration and increase the scale and intensity of the main force war even while bearing heavy casualties."

It was also agreed that the Communists were recruiting and infiltrating troops faster than they could be killed off.

Opening lead—3

One of the most important concepts of modern bidding is the all-purpose cue bid. You bid your opponent's suit to show a good hand. There are times when one of these modern cue bids succeeds in completely confusing your partner but this business of confusing your partner is not confined to complicated bids. We have seen the simplest bids lead to plenty of trouble.

When these fancy bids work they really do. Look at this 24 high card point slam bid against an opening heart bid as an example.

North's two-heart call was one of those cue bids. He was going to game and wanted to suggest a slam. South had a very sound overcall and decided to cue-bid right back to show his own slam interest. North confirmed spades as the suit. South cue-bid in diamonds to show first round control and North felt strong enough to show the club ace with a five-club call.

It should be noted that while each player cue-bid in hearts, neither one had first round control and each one showed he didn't. North could have bid four hearts over his partner's four diamonds. When he didn't, he denied that control. Similarly, South could have bid five hearts over five clubs if he could handle the first lead in that suit.

How did South know that his partner held the ace and king of spades? Easy. North would not have gone past game on his own hook without both those cards.

Jerry Hamilton, right, manager of the Blind Pony Wildlife Area fish hatchery, and Andy Moore, assistant manager, both of Sweet Springs, are shown performing a delicate and vital task at the hatchery — inducing the artificial

'Blind Pony' Hatchery Plays Vital Role

By BEULAH NICHOLS
Special to The Democrat

SWEET SPRINGS — Blind Pony Wildlife Area and Hatchery just off I-70 near here is exactly what the name implies — a 1,164-acre area set aside for public fishing and hunting, including a Missouri Conservation Department fish hatchery which is open to the public by special arrangement.

"With the exception of trout, we raise just about everything that swims," says Jerry Hamilton, hatchery manager and a Conservation Department employee. Tipping back in his chair inside his modern hatchery office, Hamilton lists spoonbill, walleye pike, northern pike, striped bass, channel cat and several other species of fish produced in quantity by the facility.

"We supply fish for stocking around the state, and we also trade with other states," Hamilton explains. "Fish are disseminated for farm ponds five acres and smaller for about 13 counties around here. We set a date for pond owners to meet at Marshall, where we distribute the fish. Anything over five acres we stock ourselves."

Research also is a vital function of the hatchery and the wildlife area. The resident biologist, Charles Suppes, works with fish diseases for all the warm-water hatcheries in the state.

On a tour of the Blind Pony hatchery, Hamilton points out two large tanks that emit a medicinal odor. The tanks hold bluegill that have been hit by a bacterial disease. The fish are being treated with teramycin inside the tanks. Hamilton explains.

Two other big tanks hold adult spoonbills that are four to five feet long. The hatchery is studying the spoonbills and trying to induce them to breed. Hamilton pulls a two-year-old "hooker," as spoonbills are called, from a larger outdoor holding tank. "Cute while they're young, aren't they?" he says.

Asked if the spoonbills are edible, Hamilton notes that snagging the large hookers is very popular during the snagging season and that the meat tastes "like a breaded tenderloin — that's what they tell me, anyway. I'm not much of a mind to eat them after working with them all day."

Thirty-nine rearing ponds covering 40 acres make up the rest of the hatchery operation.

Last year more than 20 million walleye "fry" (just-hatched fish) were shipped from the hatchery, plus 150,000 fingerling channel cat. Fingerlings, which are the bulk of the operation, take about three months to reach a length of four to six inches.

Besides the hatchery, Blind Pony offers a 200-acre, mile-long public fishing lake. Picnic tables and barbecue grills are spotted along the grassy shoreline. The grounds are immaculate and well-groomed.

A newly opened restaurant and concession stand, open from April 1 to Oct. 15, offer a lovely view of the lake. Rowboats can be rented for $2 a day, and motors also are available. All other facilities, including hunting areas and lake fishing, are free. Hamilton estimates 21,000 fishermen used the area in 1969, the first full year of operation. "We were down to about 10,000 fishermen last year, because our fish population in the lake was out of balance," he says. "We had an eight-inch rain that sent most of our bass over the dam with the overflow, but they have all been restocked."

It would appear that the prognosis for this year's fishing is a rosy one. Three airmen from Whiteman AFB recently pulled 11 bass weighing a total of 30 1/4 pounds from the lake. They said they were using plastic worms in about 15 feet of water.

The wildlife areas at Blind Pony are being managed for quail and rabbit and are popular at the opening of the hunting seasons. Hamilton notes. Some pheasants have been spotted, even though the birds aren't being stocked. "It's difficult to keep a large amount of game here throughout the hunting seasons," Hamilton says.

Another interesting aspect of Blind Pony is its name. The wildlife area and hatchery picked up the name of the Blind Pony community, a rural area purchased for the conservation department project. Old-timers recall that the area was settled by a man who arrived on a wagon pulled by blind ponies. This created such a sensation at the time that the area has continued to be called Blind Pony.

The young hatchery manager sums up the Missouri Conservation Department's goal in building and maintaining the project. "We want to provide more fishing opportunities all over the state in locations that are easily accessible to the people. By building these complexes near established communities, hatchery staffs can provide recreational facilities while they carry on the department's job of producing fish."

CITY OPERA PLANS

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York City Opera will appear at Kennedy Center in Washington from May 3 through May 14, with 15 performances of five operas.

In the spring season in New York, there will be new productions of Donizetti's "Maria Stuarda" and Lee Hoiby's "Summer and Smoke." Next fall there will be a new production of Offenbach's "The Tales of Hoffmann" and in 1973, Henze's "The Young Lord" and Donizetti's "Anna Bolena." The latter is the third in the three-opera cycle of Donizetti operas dealing with English queens, which was started by the company last year with "Roberto Devereux."

Doctors Stress Preventive Work

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Doctors are becoming more involved with man's environment and are leaning toward preventive medicine, according to officials of the American Medical Association.

Many doctors are working with local councils "to get rid of slums rather than just treating the therapeutic aspects of lead poisoning of children who eat peeling paint in poor housing," said Dr. Henri F. Wendel of New Castle, Del., vice chairman of the AMA's Council on Environmental and Public Health.

Dr. Edward Press, chairman of the council who is presiding at a two-day AMA conference on environmental health which ends today, cited "increasing ferment and liberal intent" within the AMA as the reason for the change.

"I think the interest of the American Medical Association is gradually swinging in favor of preventive medicine and community participation rather than private practice," said Press, Oregon's public health officer.

As an example, he cited this year's session of the council and its emphasis on improving housing because of its relationship to health.

The conference is devoted each year to a different environmental problem. In the past topics of discussion have been air pollution, water pollution and noise.

"This doesn't have to do with fees or practice," Press said.

"It concentrates on the prevention of disease. It means a loss of fees if successful. I think that's an indication of change, at least in image if not in action."

Wendel told newsmen the council's task is to provide doctors with information so that they can perform effectively on the local level.
